Indiciments Are Refused.

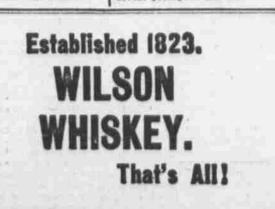

CHICAGO, July 3.—The grand jury today refused to vote indictments against the di-rectors and leading members of the Board of Trade who were recently charged with permitting the operation of "bucket shops" on the board. One witness was heard.

Several days ago Taylor had trouble with Keren Pope, a counsin of Thomas Pope, for which he was fined in police court. Yesterday afternoon the two men met and Tom demanded to know of Taylor why he had struck the girl. As an answer Taylor intimated that it was none of Pope's business and the two men mixed. Taylor was struck in the face and then he began to cut.

The wounded man was taken to the police station, where Police Surgeon Mac-Diarmid found that the cut in the left arm extended through the muscle, almost to the bone. The wounds in the back and right arm were not so serious. After the fight Taylor escaped.
