Through the historic chunel the voices of the show in the Auditorium and to this end boys and men rose and fell and swelled triumphantly as if with songs of paradise, fading away almost to a whisper at the mention of death. Even the cardinals sat spellbound at this perfection of the Gregorian chant. Not a note of instrumental music was heard throughout the mass.

At the altar Cardinal Scrafino Vannutelli the regular horses which make all of the was assisted by Cardinals Agliardi, Vincenso Vannutelli, Satolli and Richard, wearing white n itres and glistening vestments. Satolli, always swarthy, looked doubly so beside the feeble frame and white head of the aged Cardinal Richard, archbishop of Paris.
