"Ecco, ecco, la fumata!" Then silence fell like a spell upon the thousands who waited, as from the smokestack on the Sistine chapel a thin stream of lazy blue smoke curled downward, and gradually disappeared. For a moment the crowd believed that the signal meant an election, for there is a tradition that the cardinals are allowed to send up a little smoke as a notification of an election and much smoke in the case of a disagreement. Any such hopes, however, were immediately dissipated when a cloud of very thick smoke emerged and continued for five minutes. With many ejaculations of disappointment the populace watched the last trace of the ballots disappear and then dispersed, although It basilica resumed its normally quiet ap-

Prince Chigi, the marshal of the conclave, is rather disconcerted because he has no electrical device whereby he can be notified from within the moment the new pope is elected. He communicated with Magr. Merry del Val on the subject, and the latter informed him that measures would be taken to notify the marshal instantly when a decision was reached. Several attempts to establish communication with the conclave have been discovered in time and there have been some suspicious lights waving in the cells of several of the cardinals, which were interpreted as signals. These were immediately reported to the camerlingo by the marshal, and extra precautions were taken to prevent a repetition of the signals. Conetc.; have all failed up to the present time.

Commissioner Symons Recommends Appropriation of Sixty Thousand to Build New Stables for the President.

(From a Btaff Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.-(Special.)-Colwas a long time before the square of the ham as commissioner of public buildings and grounds, has prepared a report which he will submit to congress urging the necessity for building a new stable for the president. The present stable is located immediately south of the White House and State department, and in addition to being inadequate for present requirements is a blot on the landscape. The horses and vehicles used in the transaction of executive business and those employed by the commissioner of public buildings as well as those of the president are kept in this stable. #### Succession in the Army,

The retirement of Lieutenant General next week will make way for the promotion of a Pennsylvanian, Major S. B. M. Young, to the position of commanding ture, plans and everything else on general of the army. General Young will be at the head of the army less than six next January. When he retires General Chaffee will be made lieutenant general, and in the regular order General Randall will be advanced to fill the vacancy in the grade of major general.

Wood will arrive when General Chaffee reaches the statutory age for retirement on April 14, 1906. Sumner will retire in February, 1906, nearly three months be-fore Chaffee. Admiral Barker, who is in su- Wood over MacArthur and Wade to the preme command, has transferred his flag grade of lieutenant general in order to make certain that Wood shall have command of the army and become chief of staff? There is another interesting question being discussed by army officers in connection with the succession to Chaffee to the lieutenant generalship. General Corbin stands next to Miles in rank, and, although not of the line of the army, is considered likely to be selected for promo-tion to the highest rank when Chaffee retires. Corbin's advancement, however, would not materially delay the promotio of MacArthur, for the reason that Corbin will retire for age September 15, 1906, about six months after Chaffes goes out. This consideration, therefore, does not enter into the problem as to what will be done by President Roosevelt, if elected next year, when required to select a major general to fill the lieutenant generalship Chaffee retires in 1906.

The officials here are somewhat dazed by the plans of those who are promoting the trans-Alaskan-Siberian railroad. Expenses Exceed Their Pay. Officers of the United States navy who have recently returned from the European squadron are not at all enthusiastic over the entertainment which they received. These men enjoyed themselves hugely at the various receptions which were given in their honor throughout Europe, and especially in Germany and in England. But, on the other hand, the return courtesies which were absolutely essential have resulted in depleting the pocketbooks of every officer of the navy who was in any way a party to the entertainment. English and German officers are allowed a certain amount annually for the entertainment of foreign guests, but American officers must pay all these expenses out of their own pockets, and the drain is something terrific at times. There is not an officer attached to the Eu ropean squadron during the recent festlyities who has not been compelled to give up two-thirds of his salary for reciprocal entertainment to foreign officers within the past few months. To some men-those having independent incomes-this outlay is not onerous, but to the young ensign or junior lieutenant who must contribute his share toward the expenses of such an entertain ment and who has difficulty in living upon his salary this extra expense is a terrific strain and it frequently results in keeping the officer poor for years.

A case in point is that of a lieutenant of the senior grade, drawing $2,700 a year, who few years ago was sent upon a cruise which started in New York and ended in San Francisco. He was gone three years, and during the whole of that period onehalf of his salary was paid to his wife for the support of their family, consisting of four children, who were left behind in Washington. Thirteen hundred and fifty dollars a year was but a small amount with was still less for her husband, because happened that in every port visited by the ship to which he was attached social efforts crowded him and his confreres to the limit. His mess bill ate up one-third of his half of the salary which he drew. His clothing account and other small in cidentals took another third, and the remainder was of course absolutely insuffiupon him. The result of this was that at the end of three years this particular offiger was $1,500 in debt, and yet he had hardly expended a dollar upon himself aside from his mess and clothing bills.

TROUBLES OF AN ARCHITECT Slightest and Most Incidental Defect Ruin Chances of Securing Big Awards.

Said a well known architect of this city: 'It often happens that the very best work of architects is condemned because of some trivial detail in the preparation of his plans, which has nothing at all to do with the plans proper, but is merely incident to very strongly a few years ago when I was one of the competing architects for a $250. 000 court house in an eastern state. My and the Philippine service is depicted and plans were decidedly the favorite of the all right. It was just the building they in the case award was to be made to me. I had drawn originated in this vicinity in a very elaborate perspective of the building and it was on exhibition before the board. Not the slightest objection was raised to the building nor the arrangement of Martin Brett, who testified that he was that at the Her Grand. of the grounds. On the other hand, they were favorably commented upon. In the foreground I had, in order to give some animation to the picture, sketched a woman riding on horseback. One of the commission of the sioners in examining the picture discovwoman as riding on the right side of the horse and he at once condemned the picground that an architect that didn't know that a woman always rode on the left side nonths, as he will reach the retiring age of the horse was not a safe man to intrust with building a $250,000 court house. And he carried his point and I lost the job.

"A similar case occurred in the rejection of a $25,000 soldiers' monument in Philadel phia a number of years ago. The monu ment represented a soldier standing a acceptance of the monument an old veteran discovered the fact that the figure represented the soldier as having his gun inclined to the right across his breast and that the left foot was placed three inches should have been the order.
