

CHANGES IN ASSESSMENTS

Figures on Business Property Will Show Reduction, or Residence Advance.

LEMIN G HAS SURPRISE IN STORE

Not Thought that Increases on Homes Will Entirely Compensate for Decreases on Down Town Property.

Many surprises in the figures for the 1903 assessment of real estate lying between Dodge and Leavenworth streets are pointed by Tax Commissioner Fleming.

On the other hand residence property to the west and especially in the exclusive residence portion above Thirteenth street is so some in for heavy advances to the old figures.

Changes on Corresponding Cases.

The changes will run about the same percentage forward as the decreases downtown record, but will hardly reimburse the imaginary totals for the territory as the preponderance of value remains in the business district.

Not all residence property in this central portion of the city is to be raised, however, years ago, which was the last time the territory was gone over with a fine-toothed comb, as at present.

The effort made by Tax Commissioner Fleming is in general directed to effecting an equalization of values. All possible information is being secured for each piece of property.

A taxpayer owning property near Twenty-seventh and Leavenworth streets was under the impression that all values were being increased and came to the city hall to inquire about it.

Cannot Hurry Work. The work in revaluing property in the central section of the city is laborious and will require considerable time.

"One thing that I am striving to overcome is the tendency to value property by appearance. A resident may have a lot with a beautifully kept lawn and well-cared for trees and shrubs adjoining the land of a nonresident which has been allowed to become overgrown by weeds.
