Thinks Democrats Have Forfeited Right to Lecture the Populists.

WOMAN'S ATTORNEY FILES PATHETIC PLEA

Lancaster County Men Assault Law Which Makes County Surveyor Ex-Officio County Engineer to Supervise Public Work.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

LANCASTER, Aug. 15.—(Special Telegram.)—The current issue of the Nebraska Independent contains the following reply by ex-Governor Poynter to the deliverance of W. J. Bryan on the recent populist meeting in Denver:

Last week's Commoner contains a lengthy article from the pen of its distinguished editor upon the Denver conference. It is no disposition of my part to review that article, but as a member of the committee which formulated the "no trust" message Bryan is pleased to call the address sent by the Denver conference, and may be permitted to say in a few words the reasons which would have caused me to have placed the Denver conference had neither authority nor disposition to formulate a platform for the populist party, nor to speak for the party upon any of the new issues that will have to be considered at the national convention. The party has at no time been divided upon any of the new issues mentioned in the article. The conference was called solely for the purpose of unifying the populist ranks of national political policy.

Would not Mr. Bryan himself be well pleased should a number of democrats representing both wings of his party meet and agree to bury past differences and go forward a united party upon the principles of the Kansas City platform? Doubtless he would even prefer this, for it would be one condition of such agreement be that there should be no national party in 1904. This would be exactly in line for the democratic party, and it was the purpose of the Denver conference did for the populist party.

Willing to Be Fair.

It is true the populists were in favor of national fusion both at the St. Louis and Denver conferences. It was not, however, much in earnest about it at St. Louis Falls they did not even speak of it, but were content to meet the democrats upon a middle ground, nominating a democrat for the presidency and a silver republican for vice president. The democrats refused to nominate a straight democratic ticket, and called upon populists for representation in the fusion ticket. They generally did so, although protesting against it as unfair. If it was a political sin for the populist conference to repudiate national fusion, the democrats are greater sinners because they repudiated the fusion ticket. Mr. Bryan received the nomination the disapproval of the national party, but in spite of their refusal to accept Tom Watson for vice president in the Cleveland administration in preference to Towne in the second.

Two nice tricks should at least be deemed sufficient hint to the populists that the democrats will not give up their platform. The Denver conference promulgated no new doctrine, but next to the populist platform of the next national populist convention. Not a single principle was sacrificed to the democrats. The populists had the right to declare for national independent political action in 1904, and with the present outlook it would be to predict that the "rank and file" of the party will endorse the action of the Denver conference.

Makee Pathetic Plea.

"Some twelve years ago our client while traveling by rail encountered a wreck. The wrecked train took fire and while rescuing himself and assisting in rescuing helpless children, he was severely injured. He was rescued and his life was saved after many weeks spent in a hospital. After his restoration the corporation voluntarily paid her $5,000 on account of her injuries and in recognition of her heroic services to save the lives of children. She received also the sum of $5,000 and loaned it on lot 12, block 59 of the city of Lincoln, being the lot now in controversy. The money thus loaned comprises all her material wealth. If a court of equity can afford this unfortunate girl no relief it ought to hide its face for very shame. The character of the fund, the helplessness of the client, coupled with the fact that her former application for relief was denied because of a mistake in drafting her answer, will call for our deep solicitude in the matter."

Such is the somewhat remarkable and pathetic paragraph taken from a brief filed today in supreme court by counsel for Sarah Gruninger in a suit involving title to one of the lots on which stands the splendid city library building donated to the city of Lincoln by Andrew Carnegie. The lot was formerly part of the residence property of A. C. Zelmner, formerly Burlington city clerk agent here, but now a Christian Science healer and lecturer. Miss Gruninger is a relative of Zelmner and formerly at times made her home in his family.

In 1906 Charles W. Oakes brought suit to foreclose a certificate of tax sale upon this lot, which is a corner lot. The amount of the lien claimed by reason of the alleged certificate of tax sale and taxes paid in pursuance thereof is something over $400, being the taxes on the lot for two years. Sarah Gruninger, who was a nonresident, was made a party to the suit; service of notice of the suit was by publication and she claims never to have been cognizant of the proceedings. It was upon this lot that she had the mortgage for her $4,000 above alluded to. After judgment had been

The Dixon National bank of Dixon, Ill., which has been trying for ten years to reach enough property of C. W. This gave it but half what it desired. In this suit it is joined by the People's National bank of Rock Island, another victim.
