DEMOCRATS PICK DELEGATES

Douglas County Representatives for Two Conventions Chosen

DECLINE TO REPUDIATE THE BAR TICKET

Resolution Offered by Judge Shields is Tabled by a Decisive Viva Voce Vote in County Gathering

The democratic convention yesterday afternoon gave very positive indication as to what it wanted its delegates to do at the judicial convention. It had the chance when G. W. Shields proposed doing away with the endorsement of the bar ticket idea, and the ruling was against any such abandonment. The vote was viva voce, but the "ayes" were weak and scattering while the "noes" manifested considerable temper. It was said privately even that Judge Shields wanted to make a vacancy to which he himself might be hoisted.

Apert from this all the convention did was to name delegates to the state and judicial conventions and pass a resolution offered by Judge E. R. Duffie endorsing Supreme Judge Sullivan and declaring that the Douglas County Democracy is anxious for his re-nomination and re-election.

J. J. O'Connor, who was chairman, opened the same and good-natured convention, which was not at all largely attended, with some very peppery remarks, directed mainly at the gentlemen who represented Douglas county last winter in what he called "the most corrupt legislature in the history of Nebraska." He found fault with the republican state convention for endorsing any such governmental body, declaring that the legislature had played into the hands of the railroads whenever it had a chance, and in fact lent a willing ear to all the big corporations. He deplored the lack of legislation that enabled equitable local taxation of the railroads and withdrew Senator Hall by saying he was "late of Toronto, Canada."

Jim Dahlman Explains a Few

County Chairman Dahlman thought it advisable to explain to the "rank and file" how delegates came to be chosen to the convention by committees. He laid it mainly to a laudable desire to practice economy and assured his hearers that there had been no "scheme." He said that after it was over he had received letters from the "Herdman gang" asking him to call another meeting of the committee to arrange for primaries, but he concluded that the objectors to the original plan were objecting merely for objection's sake, and therefore he did not get active.

Judge Shields presented his non-partisan resolution just before delegates to the judicial convention were chosen. He precluded it with a speech in which he went on to tell what the law demanded on the ballot, as related in The Bee Friday. He said a man's name could appear only once on the ballot and that if the democrats nominated the bar ticket they would have only four candidates to sell under their banner as the republicans had already annexed the other three to figure in their procession. The former county attorney presented a detailed bill of reasoning intended to show that the democratic voter would lose three-sevenths of his vote under the non-partisan plan. The vital paragraph of his resolution read:

Therefore, be it resolved, That it is the sense of this convention, that at the democratic convention to be held September 1, 1903, in this city, the delegates thereof of this county shall use their votes and influence to nominate a full judicial ticket of seven candidates, none of whom shall be any of the candidates nominated by the republican party.

Pushed Off the Pier

When he had finished reading it Shields moved that the resolution be adopted, but R. H. Montgomery of South Omaha immediately voiced an amendment to lay the resolution on the table. This was seconded by James C. Dahlman with a speech calculated to pave the way to oblivion, and in a few minutes the document and sentiments it contained were pushed off toward that wide gulf.

Frank Plank served as secretary to the convention. The delegates were chosen by the representatives of the various wards and precincts present. The 118 delegates to the state convention were distributed as follows: Each Omaha ward, 8; each South Omaha ward, 4; each country precinct, 1, and 5 at large. The ninety-eight to the judicial convention as follows: Each Omaha ward, 7; each South Omaha ward, 3; each country precinct, 1; at large, 1. These are the delegates chosen yesterday afternoon:

SOME CONTRAST IN COSTUME

Picture Presented When John L. Webster Visited Sagamore Hill

A special dispatch from Oyster Bay says: "President Roosevelt will not discuss the candidacy of any man for second place on the ticket, but he knows Mr. Webster very well as a republican and a lawyer."

The first meeting of President Roosevelt and Hon. John L. Webster as treasurer in the memory of Senator Millard is not without interest to those who have become familiar with the smiling ivory arcade and the breezy middle distance which the cartoonists have inked upon the mind of the public as the personality of the strenuous president, and to those who know the carefully groomed Mr. Webster. The meeting was at Oyster Bay where Senator Millard had taken Mr. Webster during the eastern visit of that attorney last September at the time when the Panama canal commission was being formed.

The former chief of all rough riders had been at pistol practice with his eldest son. Observe, as did the eye of Senator Millard on the one side leader of the republican party, the president over all the states and territories and all the islands; a collarless shirt upon him open at the throat, one suspender hanging loose for more freedom, perspiring face with sweating veins above the collar band, while in the right hand, the fingers of which are blackened by the escaping powder gas, dangles the six-shooter with its necessary to shift to the other side for the conventional shaking of hands; at the other extreme, the crisp and cool Mr. Webster, dressed as Mr. Webster always is, with perhaps a bit of extra special trousing for the occasion. "It was an interesting picture," said Senator Millard; "one I shall not forget."

Finally Called to Order.

John O. Yeiser finally called the meeting to order and stated that before Chairman Thomas left the city he had said he considered it inexpedient to nominate a judicial ticket at this time; that he had been in correspondence with a number of populists in this and other counties of the district, and they agreed with him that it would be best for the populists to wait until after the democrats had made nominations and then select a ticket made up from the republican and democratic tickets, and with possibly one or more populists on it. The idea, he said, was not to fuse, but to present to the voters a strictly non-partisan ticket.

George A. Magney endorsed the above sentiments and moved that the convention adjourn to September 7 at 12 p. m. When it was found that the day set was Labor day the date was shoved forward twenty-four hours.

P. L. Forgan lent the only spice to the little meeting. He moved to amend the motion to the effect that the convention proceed to nominate candidates. The explanations given for postponing doing so, he said, were not satisfactory. He read an extract from a news article in The Bee to the effect that the populists were not likely to take any independent action, but would probably adjourn until after the democratic judicial convention, and then attempt a double fusion act with both the democrats and republicans. He was sick, Mr. Forgan continued, of holding onto any party's tail, and urged that the populists act independently of all parties. There had been too much watching of other parties, and its course in this respect had ruined the populist party in the state and made it a laughing stock in Douglas county. But there was no second to Mr. Forgan's motion, and the motion to adjourn to September 7 was carried without further discussion.

County Convention.

Immediately after the meeting adjourned Chairman Cowles called for "order" again and Secretary Emblem read the call for a county convention, the call providing that all members of the populist party present be members of the convention, and that the business to be transacted was the selection of 100 delegates and 100 alternates to the state convention at Grand Island, August 31.

J. J. Points, George A. Magney, John O. Yeiser, James McConies and T. G. Kellogg were appointed a committee to select the delegates and alternates. After the committee had, with considerable labor, made up a list of 100 populists of Douglas county to act as delegates, it concluded not to attempt making up a list of another 100 populists to act as alternates, and brought in a report recommending that the following be appointed delegates:

List of Delegates.
Here is the list reported by the committee, which was adopted by the meeting: J. J. Points, E. Stoddard, P. L. Forgan, J. W. Logan, C. Vincent, Martin Langdon, K. W. Runkles, W. F. Franklin, Peter Kievel, Hamlin Blunt, D. L. Thomas, Dr. E. A. Cook, N. E. Adams, John Quinn, M. L. Platts, Patrick Hines, P. J. Mehan, J. M. McCarthy, J. H. McMeiners, A. H. Sweney, P. L. Quinlan, W. J. Welshans, H. B. Pligim, V. O. Kinney, W. S. Wright, Orlando Cowles, A. R. Dodson, N. E. Esney, George Cowles, L. L. Byers, Chester Miller, Fred Moulton, James Metler, O. A. The county convention to nominate a county ticket will be held, Chairman Cowles stated, sometime in October after the republicans and democrats have held their conventions. It will not, he added, be held in connection with the democratic county convention but further than this, or what action will probably be taken by it, he said he could not predict.

JOLLY TIME IN THE COUNTRY

Domestic Science Department of Woman's Club Has a Picnic and Outing.
The social science department of the Woman's club will go again to Fort Calhoun whenever its members receive half an indication that they are expected. This was the emphatically expressed sentiment of those of the social department, the club officers and a few friends who last Tuesday visited the city as the guests of Mrs. Arthur D. Brandeis and W. H. Woods. The Locust Lane dairy had prepared a reception for the party with cold milk and other refreshments, but the heavy showers which were the only thing to mar the day's pleasure, prevented some of the party from visiting the dairy. The club women returned home by the evening train, tired but well pleased with the excursion. Mrs. F. H. Cole, the club president, and Miss McCarthy, department secretary, were not able to be present.

At the home of Mr. Woods the party examined many relics from old Fort Atkinson, and during a shower listened to the story of "Nakoma," the romance of the old fort, as told by Mrs. MacMurphy. Mr. Woods, Mrs. Worcesterly and Mrs. Drake told of early day incidents.
From the house of Mr. Wood the party

After Considerable Labor Select One Hundred Douglas County Populists to Attend State Convention at Grand Island.

Unable to score up more than a dozen delegates for their widely advertised convention yesterday at Washington hall to name a "nonpartisan" judicial ticket the populists, after waiting in vain for a crowd adjourned to meet again September 7, at which time the democrats will have met and placed a ticket in the field from which the pops can cull their pick.

Notwithstanding the wide-open and free-for-all invitation extended by the populist committee to participate in selecting a "nonpartisan" judicial ticket only an even dozen men had gathered in Washington hall at 2:30 o'clock yesterday, thirty minutes after the hour set for the meeting, and among those present not a single republican or democrat was visible to the naked eye.

It was announced that Chairman Thomas and Secretary Quinby were both out of town, and neither John O. Yeiser, P. L. Forgan, J. J. Points or George A. Magney, the four old war horses present, seemed disposed to start the ball rolling.

LONG FOR COMING OF LORA

Omaha Police Await Boat from Which to Land Couple from South Dakota.
Omaha has made wonderful progress as a port for taking the figures of last year and of today and of the same date last year the tonnage anchored at the foot of Douglas street will be 100 per cent greater. This is if the good ship "Lora," sailing out of Sioux City is able to get past the East Omaha bridge to its berth alongside the houseboat by the Douglas street bridge.

The ship is reported to have anchored at the nearest town, but the sailing direction near Blair Friday night and is expected to signal in at any moment. It would, in all probability, have been in its berth last night if it had not encountered equally weather above Tokamah with an exceptionally heavy bank on the Nebraska side of the river. Lora was swept broadside on the lee shore and with such terrific force that the starboard paddle box was put in the "bum," five paddles broken out of the wheel and a casting broken.

The first mate was sent ashore to locate the nearest town, but the sailing directions were not what they should have been and it was late before he made Tokamah. He took the train and arrived Friday evening in Omaha, where he has had a new casting made and is waiting under the Douglas street bridge for the steamer to come down for the iron work.

Lora, which has been put in commission by Sioux City business men, is in command of Captain Billy Simms and is in the passenger excursion trade. It brings down a few from up river points. Two of these will meet a warm welcome here, as Detectives Striker and Hudson will be on the bank when they arrive to take them to the safest hotel in the city. These are Albert Shepherd, 22 years old, and Amanda Salisbury, 12 years of age, both from Dakota City, where Sheriff Aldes and Father Salisbury recovered them after their return. The police are informed that the case is one of abduction.

drove to "Arlina Lodge," the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Brandeis, where on the wide verandas lunch was served. After the festive appetite had been buried in plenty, Mrs. Lobingier, as toastmistress, called forth much pleasant speech and also many patriotic "stand up for Nebraska" words, possibly inspired by the beautiful sample in view from the veranda. Miss Slioman of Detroit, a niece of Mrs. Brandeis, sang and recited most pleasingly. In a hayrack the party reached the station, where they sang patriotic and college songs in which the townspeople and the traveling public joined. A generous basket of flowers from Mr. Woods' garden was distributed on the train and another sent to the Old People's home.

Following the afternoon exercises which continued until after 8 o'clock a balloon ascension occurred, wherein the aeronaut was shot from a huge cannon, descending by means of a parachute. Then came an exhibition drill by the drill team of Algonquin camp No. 1, Woodmen of the World, which was excellently well given, and elicited much applause.
