In 1887 the association opened the Old Ladies' Home at Twenty-seventh and Burt streets, but recognizing the need of a place where aged men might also be care for, there being no such institution in the state. the association was re-incorporated about a year ago, the name being changed to the Old People's Home, and the women began looking about for a suitable building, the one then occupied having long since become inadequate to the needs. At a cost of $10,000 the new property was acquired, the building being remodeled and on Sunday the new home was dedicated, free of debt, though it was necessary to place a small mortgage on the old property, which is otherwise unincumbered. Though the home is partially self-supporting, the additional task of raising funds for a new building bas been great and in
