Reliance at first reached homeward under balloon jib topsall and then carried its spinnaker for a mile, only to resort to the belloon again. With the wind aft of the beam, main sheet well in and balloon bellying, it made good time and drew away from the challenger until the wind softened, when the speed of both slackened.

Shamrock Caught the Wind, Shamrock III caught a freshening wind first and cut down Reliance's lead half a mile before the leader caught it. Then Reliance steadily gained until it had made good its two-mile lead and added another half mile to it. In trying to hold the wind in their jib topsails both yachts had run off their course, but at 4:30 both set spinnakers and headed straight for the finish. The wind was dying away and the spinnakers drew poorly. Reliance was moving not more than four -miles an hour and Shamrock III was two miles and a half astern when the committee boat signalled that the race was off. He claims in effect that the failure of the legislature to provide means for the city to pay its hydrant ental cancels the obligation. This sounds like good populist doctrine, but I venture a guess that it is not good law. I think no one will deny that the water company has furnished the service for which paynent is sought, and that it is a contract debt owing by the city. This would seem to cover the whole question as to the justness of our claim.

"As to the appraisal matter, which Mr. Wright drags in by the heels, it not only has no relation to the hydrant bill, but if Mr. Wright is correctly quoted he has uttered some willful and malicious untruths concerning it. He is certainly not inormed that the water company 'has had the inventory drawn up and ready in its office for weeks,' or for any other period. It is certainly not true that 'the tactics of the company have been those of delay, and that it has 'hung back and interposed President Pierson and a discussion of objections.' The best proof of this is that papers on "The Improvement of Longevity" the company need not have entered into appraisal negotiations whatever until after september 4. Mr. Wright talks as if the inventory of the water company's property were as simple a matter as taking account of a small grocery stock. He either knows better or else knows nothing at all of the subject, and is therefore incompetent to

Coming from the west on the same train with the senator and his wife was a very old and infirm woman, who was traveling alone. She was scarcely able to provide fo her simple wants on the train and th ordinary routine of traveling to her seemed great difficulties. She was enroute from California to Virginia. The heavy rains and consequent washouts and delays multiplied her troubles and in fact the annoyances of all the persons on the train not a little. The remainder of the little story related as she sat in the Union station ran something this.

"I was greatly worried over the damage done by the rain and the train was greatly delayed. I did not know anything about my onnections in Omaha or how to get along if the train was late. But way back along the line some place a gentleman and his wife became interested in me and advised me not to worry. They did many little things to make me comfortable on the train and talked with me as old acquaintances might and I must say they did everything they could to make the trip pleasant and comfortable for me.

"When we reached Omaha I did not know what to do, but the gentleman told me not to worry. He put me in a carriage with himself and his wife and drove to the Paxton hotel, where they secured accommodutions for me. Then he found out all about my train and when I should leave and had me brought back here to the station. In saying goodbye to them I told the lady I must know her name so I could write to

"'My name is Dolliver,' she said. 'We live at Fort Dodge.' " 'Is your husband a merchant there?' asked.

" 'No,' she replied, 'he is a senator.' " The old woman was helped safely aboard her train and her last words were that Iowa senators and their wives were the kindest and best disposed persons in the universe.

Woman Denies All.

Mrs. Allie Powers, the woman who was accused by her husband in a petition for divorce of having posed undraped before a kodak, has filed an answer to his accurations denying every one of them. George Shepard, whom the husband named as a co-respondent, also has a "come-back," saying it isn't so.
