Training for Golf Contest.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—The Woman's National golf tournament, which will open on the Chicago Golf club links at Whenton, Ill., next Tuesday, to select a champion to succeed Mrs. Charles T. Stout, promises to be the keenest contest among women in the history of the game in the United States. Nearly all of the sixy-three players entered for the contest have arrived and are putting in hard work to get in shape for the tournament. This course is in excellent condition and the pelintinary practice of the competitors indicates that several records will be smashed before the close of the tournament Saturday afternoon. Players from Pittsburg, Boston, Philadelphia and St. Louis, together with the local force, kept the links crowded all day and several spirited contests resulted. Despite a high wind, which made perfect golf an impossibility, low scores were the order of the day, and the course was covered by all the players in 120 or less. Mrs. Stout, the present champion, is unfortunately prevented from entering the tournament, as is also Mrs. A. E. Manice, champion of the Woman's Metropolitan Golf association of New York, but saide from these, the entiry is representative of the entire country.

"The security of our positions was largely gauged by the frictionless and economical manner in which we could settle these claims," said the agent. "There was a lot of them occurring and the drain on the claim department was no little figure. I reached the Swede's home and was authorized to settle for not to exceed $75. The cow was probably not worth $18, but the road wanted to make friends of the people along the line, and we did not object to paying about 1,000 per cent in excess of the real value of the stock killed. As soon as I told the Swede that I had come to settle the matter he seemed a trifle uneasy and I thought I was up egainst it hard. After this the play began to go Stewart's way, and although it was close until the finish, Stewart won out by the score given.

The contest has been on at the Country club for the past week, and the enthusiasis have industed in a great deal of speculation as to who was going to take the champion-ship.
