LONDON, Oct. 5 .- The duke of Devonshire, who was leader of the conservative me. party in the House of Lords, has resigned the office of lard president of the councit and the king has accepted his resignation. The duke wrote to Mr. Balfour glying the reasons for his resignation, which he attributed, among other things. pamphlet on insular free trade. The duke of Devonshire has not yet made his letter public, but the following letter of ac knowledgment from Mr. Balfour was pub-

WHITTINGHAM, Oct. 3.—My Dear Duke: I received this afternoon two telegrams, the first from you asking how soon your resignation might be announced and the second giving a full summary of the reasons which moved you to resign. I am not sure which of these communications surprised me most. On the whose, perhaps it was the second. The first, however, was sufficiently strange. Do you remember the circumstances? It was on september 15 that you informed me of your resolve to remain in the government. This decision was preceded by much confidential correspondence, much intimate conversation. There was no phase of polley which I was not prepared to discuss and which I did not, in fact, discuss with perfect frankness. WHITTINGHAM, Oct. 3 .- My Dear Duke:

Mensures were surveyed from every point of view bearing on the present course and future fortunes of the barry. The decision arrived at after these preliminaries I had a right to consider final, and final i certainly considered it. Accordingly I consulted you as far as the circumstances as to time and place permitted, also the best mode of filling the vacancies. You were good enough to express some weighty judgments on the delicate matters submitted to you. You even initiated proposals of your own, which I gladly accepted.

Resignation is Strange.

Our lust communication on these subjects was in the letter I dictated during my journey to Sheffield on Thursday afternoon. Less than forty-eight hours thereafter I received in Edinburgh the telegrams which first announced your intention to resign and your desire to see the process of resignation consummated without delay and without discussion. The principal occasion for this singular transformation was, you tell me, my Sheffield speech. This is strange indeed. In intention, at least, there was no doctrine contained in that speech which was not contained in my note on insular free trade and in my published letter to Mr. Chamberhim.

and in my published letter to Mr. Chamberlain.

The first of these decumeries you had in your possession before the generality of the cabinet. The second you saw the manuscript of before it appeared in the press. With both, therefor, you were intimately acquainted during the whole fortnight in which you lent your countenance to the government after the resignations. I must suppose, therefore, that it is some unintentional discrepancy between the written and apoken words which now drives you to desert the administration you so long adorned. Buch unintentional discrepancies are without doubt hard to avoid.

Not every one, certainly not I, can always be sure of finding on the spur of the moment, before an eager audience of 5,000 people, the precise phrase which shall dexforously express the exact opinion of the speaker on difficult and abstract subjects to foil his opponents who would wrest it either to the right hand or the left.

Question Devoushire's Sincerity.

her man than yourself had expended so ich luquisitorial subtlety in detecting orginary things I should have surmised that he was more anxious to pick a quarrel than particular as to the sufficiency of its occasion. To you, fortunately, no such auspicion can attach. Pet, am I unreasonoccasion. To you, fortunately, no such suspicion can attach. Yet, am I unreasonable in thinking that your resignation gives me some just occasion of complaint and perhaps some special occasion of regret to yourself? Am I for example, not right in complaining of your procedure in reference to my Sheffield speech? You fear that it will aggravate the party division. If there is any certain thing it is the declaration of the policy then made produced a healing effect and is destined to produce more hatmony in the party than has prevalled since the fleeal question first came to the front six mouths ago. Had you resigned at all, this healing effect would have suffered no interruption. To resign now and to resign on the speech is to take the course most calculated to make harder the hard task of the peacemaker.

Deserts Ship in Distress.

Assin, do you not feel some special regret at having, at this particular juncture, to sever your connection with a unionist administration? Doubtless there is no imaginable occasion on which you could have left one without inflicting on it a serious loss. At the moment of its most buoyant prosperity your absence from its councils would have been sensibly feit, but you have, in fact, left it when, in the opinion of our opponents, its fortunes are at the lowest and its perplexities at the greatest. Maybe, however, you are spared this aggravation of the inevitable pain of separation by holding, as I hold, that our opponents are in this mistaken. I firmly believe they are, I see no difficulty in carrying out the policy which for a fortinght you were willing to accept, by the aid of an administration which for a fortinght you were willing to accept, by the aid of an administration which for a fortinght you helped me to construct.

On this point I feel no disquist. I cannot pretend to view with light equanimity the loss of a colleague whose services to the unionist party no thange and chance of political fortute can tempt any unionist to forget. Yours sincerely, Deserts Ship in Distress.

Yours sincerely,

New Cubinet Members.

Continuing Mr. Dickinson maintained that the British argument at the best only 'Portland canal" of the treaty is the "channel" claimed by the United States. If there was any such doubt, it must be solved by evidence of the interpretation Great Britain and Russia gave to the meaning of the treaty by their subsequent acts. Their acts conclusively proved that the identity of the Portland canal was not only never questioned until 1888 or 1889, but on the other hand that it was always governments to be the channel claimed in 1859, by order of Parliament naming the lower, part of the disputed body of water "Portland inlet," which was a distinct official declaration on the part of Great

Now Sir Henry Howard, the British min ister at The Hague, is reported to be the king's choice for the post of ambassador at Washington. The king alone will make the selection, and it is unlikely that the premier or the Foreign office will be requested to nominate the ambassador. The likilest selection from the service is said to be Sir Arthur Nicholson, British minister to Morroco, who is regarded as being in the line for an embassy.
