There is also inconvenience arising from the accumulation of money in the treasury, but our present able secretary of the treasury, by means of the authority, has minimized this inconvenience by utilizing, from time to time, our national banks as depositories of the surplus money, thus enabling it to be returned and utilized in the various channels of circulation. I do not claim perfection for the details of either our tariff laws or our monetary laws. The subject of the currency may be considered by the congress soon to convene, but I am sure that no change will receive the sanction of a republican congress that will so revolutionize our system as to deprive this government itself of the substantial control that it now has and excercises over bank circulation, as well as over other forms of paper money, nor will any modification be made that will not provide absolute security of the notes issued by or under the authority of the government and their convertibility at the will of the holder into gold.

So it would seem that under present conditions there is no pressing necessity for great changes as respects our money circulation and it also appears that although there is inconvenience at certain seasons of the year, arising from the necessity of transferring our circulation from one portion of the country to another, the inconvenience is not so great as to make imperative immediate legislation to facilitate these transfers.

No trains have reached this city over the Pennsylvania railroad since midnight last night, because of the flood at Trenton, where the tracks of the company are under six feet of water. The flood at that point is caused by the high water in the Delaware river backing up the waters in Assanhink creek.

During the period of great difficulty and trial, our progress has been constantly forward and upward so that we now enjoy in our country more of the blessings of a free people than are enjoyed by a like number of people anywhere else on the face of the globe.

We have in President Roosevelt the ideal chief magistrate who has brought to his great office high culture and high ideals. He meets courageously every public inconvenience and decides it wisely, bringing credit to the government at home and bonor abroad. He has gained the confidence of his countrymen to a high degree. No other president in office was ever more beloved by all the people than he. Years ago, at a meeting of the leading specialists of the medical fession, it was determined to establish in Omaha an ideal Institute for the treatment of genito urinary and sexual diseases. It was placed under the guidance of men whose brilliant reputation as authors and experts in these particular diseases is duly recognized by the profession, both in America and Europe. Hence Omaha possesses one of the most complete institutions for the treatment of special and chronic diseases, an institution that is authorised by the state and thoroughly reliable. Its services are within the reach of ail. No misleading statements or unbusinesslike propositions are made to the afflicted in order to secure their patronage. The many years of our successful practice in Omaha prove that our special treatment for men is SAFE and CERTAIN.
