

ready for the transfer if you will sign the check now."

This was done, and just as it was completed the door from the inner office swung open and Marchmont looked up just in time to see Heath.

Marchmont turned on him savagely: "You won, I suppose you had these 100 shares in your control all the time and lied to me when you said you had only 50, eh?"

The young man's eyes blazed at the charge, and he took one hasty step forward, then stopped and said:

"You are an old man, and you are beside yourself at being caught in a game not a bit worse than you have played on other people—on me, for instance. It is hardly necessary for me to say that I did not lie to you. Here is the owner of that 100-share lot."

And from the inner office walked Emily. "As soon as I organized the company," continued Heath, "I set aside 100 shares as a wedding present for Emily. I put these into Folk's hands to hold as a trustee for her, and did not intend to tell her of it until we were married. Your offer to sell me 400 shares led me to the conclusion that it might be a good plan for Emily to sell you her shares at a profit. She has done so."

"You once said that if I could show you my ability in business you would give your consent to our marriage. I am asking this on Emily's account only. As you know, she celebrated her twenty-first birthday last week and has promised to marry me whether you give your consent or not. I have a carriage at the door, and we are going to be married at noon."

For a few moments the old fighter looked steadily into the eyes of the youngster who had worsted him. Each read in the eyes of the other clear grit. Then the old man looked at the girl. She was crying softly, but her hand was slipped in Heath's.

"I think I underrated you, Heath," said the old man. "For a long time there has been no 'company' in Marchmont & Co. Would you care to become a partner? I believe that together we will get almost all of the money there is on the exchange."

Twenty-Second Infantry

B. Stanley, Jr., Isaac Newell and F. W. Lewis.

The regiment remained at Mobile until April 28, and then went to Tampa, Fla. A number of recruits had been added to the regiment in the meantime and a number of additional officers joined it. From Tampa the regiment proceeded to Cuba and was made a part of the First brigade, Second division, Fifth Army corps. The regiment left Tampa on June 14 on board the transport Orizaba for Santiago de Cuba. On June 20 Colonel Wikoff was placed in command of the Third brigade, First division of the Fifth Army corps, and Lieutenant Colonel Patterson assumed command of the regiment. The command arrived off Morro castle June 20, and disembarked on June 22. It was placed in the extreme advance and took possession of Siboney on June 23 and captured the first stand of Spanish colors taken during the war in Cuba by Americans. To Captain Crittenden's Company B does this honor belong. The regiment was in General Lawton's division and participated in the battle of El Caney on July 1, in which Colonel Wikoff was killed and Colonel Patterson was severely wounded. The total loss to the regiment in this engagement in killed and wounded was six officers and two enlisted men wounded and forty-four enlisted men killed. At the battle of Santiago on July 2 one enlisted man was killed and two wounded. The regiment occupied trenches in front of Santiago until the final capitulation of the Spanish army on June 14.

August 13 the regiment embarked on the transport Mobile for home, arriving at Montauk Point, N. Y., on August 26. Several of the command died enroute. Disembarking, the command went into camp at Camp Wikoff, so named in honor of the regiment's late colonel. It left Camp Wikoff September 16 and arrived at Fort Crook again on September 19.

The Twenty-second was given but five months' rest from its arduous Cuban campaign, when, on January 27, 1890, the regiment left Fort Crook and proceeded by rail to San Francisco, arriving there January 31. On the following day, with twenty-six officers and 1,076 enlisted men, under command of Colonel H. C. Egbert, the regiment sailed for Manila, Philippine islands, on board the transports Senator and Ohio, arriving at Manila, P. I., March 4 and 5, and on March 6 and 7 disembarked and occupied the Malate barracks.

On March 10 Companies B, C, H and I were assigned to points on the line of outposts southwest of San Pedro Macati, and thus began another period of long, arduous and active service against the enemy. It participated in the Pasig expedition under General Lloyd Wheaton, and on the Malolos expedition, of which the First Nebraska volunteers was also a part. It was also a part of General Lawton's northern expedition, which continued from April 21 to May 23. During this campaign Colonel Egbert was killed. The regiment participated in all the general operations in the Philip-pinas up to the time of its departure for the United States in the early part of 1902. The regiment arrived home from the Philippines in March of that year. The field staff of the First battalion and Companies A and D arrived at Fort Robinson March 8. Headquarters, field staff and band and Companies B and C arrived March 9 at Fort Crook and on March 11 Companies E, F, G, H, I, K, L, and M arrived at Fort Crook. Companies A and D were finally transferred to Fort Reno, Okl., and Companies B and C to Fort Logan H. Roots, Ark., and the regiment has been thus stationed since its return from the Philippines.
