"The Wonderful Electric Elephant" Will Keep Children Out of Mischief. IS ENTERTAINING, AMUSING, MYSTIFYING

Senator Lodge's Article in the Series on "The Government of the United States" in Scribner's is Entitled "The Senate."

The November number of the Smart Set opens with a novella by Cyrus Townsend Brady, entitled "The Corner in Coffee."

"The Woman in Love" is the title of an essay in Ainslee's for November that is not likely to receive the unqualified assent of women readers.

"The Being with the Upright Face," by Clarence Lathbury. The author develops his thought on lines similar to those of the "New Thought," but with the discrimination that denotes a trained intellect.

"Letters Home," a novel by William Dean Howells. Mr. Howells has told this exceedingly interesting story in letters written to their various homes by a group of people who are in New York for different reasons.

LOWNEY'S Chocolate Bonbons. Every Package Guaranteed! If you buy Lowney's Candies in the original sealed packages you will find them in perfect condition, or money refunded.

These letters not only describe New York life from interesting and novel viewpoints, but place before the reader the facts of a series of complications which form the basis of this novel of the American metropolis. Published by Harpers.

"A Child's Letters to Her Husband," by Helen Waterson Moody. Perhaps the following quotation will give the best hint of what this unusual book is like: "My Dear Husband: It is very convenient not to be acquainted with the person you are writing to, especially if it is your husband."

"The Young Man Entering Business," by Orison Sweet Marden. Dr. Marden writes in a straightforward vein from the first page to the last, advising young men when and where to go into business, and how best to succeed.

"The Bondage of Ballinger," by Rowell Field. Ballinger is a dear old New Englander, whose passion for books leads him into many a dilemma.

"The Woman in Love" is the title of an essay in Ainslee's for November that is not likely to receive the unqualified assent of women readers. However one may disagree with the author's opinion, no one can deny his sympathy with the subject and his originality of treatment.

The brist attack on mobocracy that was a leading feature of the October Everybody's has been followed up in the November issue by a significant article on "Successful Men Who Are Not Rich."

"The Being with the Upright Face," by Clarence Lathbury. The author develops his thought on lines similar to those of the "New Thought," but with the discrimination that denotes a trained intellect and the choice diction of a literary artist.

These letters not only describe New York life from interesting and novel viewpoints, but place before the reader the facts of a series of complications which form the basis of this novel of the American metropolis. Published by Harpers.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

City Council Reviews Protest Against Street Cleaning Ordinance. SWIFT & COMPANY SIGN REMONSTRANCE

At last night's council meeting a remonstrance was presented by Swift and Company and others against the proposed street cleaning ordinance and the closing of Railroad avenue to traffic.

A request was made for a street arc light at Thirtieth and Madison streets. This went to the street and alley committee for consideration.

Ordinance No. 1190, declaring the necessity for the placing of a watchman at the railroad crossing at Thirty-seventh and L streets came up for third reading and was passed.

Officials of the street car company called at the office of the city engineer yesterday for the purpose of securing information regarding the grades of certain streets in South Omaha.

Since Herman Beal, the city engineer, made a tour of the city and notified a number of people who were building houses to secure permits, the number of permits issued have increased.

The Southeast Improvement club, of which John Kennedy is president and J. McCarthy is secretary, sent a notice last night to the members of the Board of Education calling attention to the condition of the frame buildings at the Madison school.

Mrs. St. George, 340 N street, is reported to be quite sick. Heavy foundations are being laid for the new school building at Twenty-sixth and Q streets.

Permanent sidewalks are being laid on both sides of Q street from Twenty-third to Twenty-fourth streets.

NEW NEBRASKA REVENUE LAW

Henry W. Yates Points Out How It May Be Expected to Operate.

OMAHA, Oct. 20.—To the Editor of The Bee: The resistance which is being offered by the business men to the enforcement of the new revenue law, may be deemed by many to be merely one of the usual proceedings undertaken by interested property owners to evade or defeat equitable taxation.

The theory, I think, under which the taxation of property is undertaken, is that capital, no matter where or in what manner it is employed, shall bear the burden and where capital cannot be reached or ascertained, then tangible assets must be taxed.

An illustration will show the operation of the law in this respect. The First National bank of Omaha has capital, surplus and undivided profits to the amount of $125,000 and to this extent it should be liable for taxation if all other property was valued full in the same manner.

This statement may seem preposterous, even to Mr. Fleming, and certainly to everybody else, but I believe an inspection of the law, and applying thereto Mr. Fleming's construction of it, will show that I am correct.

If other business corporations and individuals can be taxed in this way, so can the banks. Of course, there would be no taxation of shares for the reason that the deduction of tangible assets would leave nothing for the tax.

A very large attendance was present at the Monday evening meeting at the First Presbyterian church of the Walton society.

The announced meeting by Dr. Chapman has been postponed until Thursday, and it is not at all certain that the doctor will get here at that time, as his plane has been changed and may prevent his arrival.

The New York Press says of him: "A forcible, impetuous speaker of pleasing personality, able to answer concisely and turn to the best account an unexpected question from an inquirer in the audience, using no notes of any kind and utilizing incidents of the hour for illustration, Dr. Gray has at the same time the accuracy and assurance of the scholar and the enthusiasm of the student."

TABLE AND KITCHEN

Menu. BREAKFAST. Cereal, Shredded Beef, Toast. LUNCH. Macaroni Croquettes, Egg Salad, Cocoa. DINNER. Creamed Oyster Soup, Roast Shoulder of Veal, Mashed Potatoes, Striped Bean Salad, Grape Fraipée, Coffee.

Prairie Chicken—Prairie chickens make a good fricassee; get a young and tender roast in a very hot oven with an even brown, larding with thin strips of fat bacon; remove from pan to a hot platter; add two tablespoonsful of flour to the gravy in pan; half a pint of boiling water; stir until smooth, strain and serve with chicken.

Roast Quail—Clean your quail, remove heads and feet, arrange the joints, wrap each bird in a covering of thinly sliced pork place in a cooking pan just large enough to hold them. Cover with boiling water, a little sprinkling of salt and pepper, then place over a hot fire ten minutes. Remove the pork, dry each bird with a cloth, spread them well with butter and roast brown in a very hot oven, baste frequently with melted butter, strain the broth in which they were broiled, mix with it an equal quantity of melted currant jelly. Serve quail hot.

Partridge Fricassee—Clean your birds, divide a piece of butter the size of an egg, heat very hot, roll each piece of fowl in flour, pack closely in hot butter, cover tightly, cook for ten minutes, then add water enough to keep from burning. Simmer slowly until tender, strain the skin off the fat, season with cayenne and lemon juice; heat up slowly without allowing to boil. Border the dish with fried bread or mush triangles; put the game in the center; pour the gravy over it and serve.

Broiled Birds—Clean and split the birds down the back, sprinkle with salt, dredge with flour to prevent the escape of the juices. Place in a wire broiler inside next to fire. Allow ten minutes for quail, twenty-five to forty for partridges and prairie chickens. When done place them on a hot dish. Butter well on both sides; serve on toast. If the breasts of the birds are quite thick, broil them slowly and covered at first.

WHAT THE OLD DOCTOR SAID. "Doctor," said I, "you say appendicitis is much more common than it was thirty years ago." "Indeed it is," replied the old doctor. "That we encountered this disease then, is true, but not with such appalling frequency. Appendicitis, these days, is almost as common as sore throat."
