For an encore he sang a dirge to the air of "The Old Oaken Bucket," entitled "The Democrats' Lament." It is a poetical picture of democratic distress over being fired from the one of the hits of the meeting.

J. L. Kennedy reviewed the merits of all the republican candidates, beginning with the constables and justices of the peace. "The constables," he said, "are the laboring man's sheriffs, and the justices of the peace are the judges for the poor men of liberty, and if Bryan had been a brave and laboring men and are just as important in the political economy of the state as the judges of the supreme court are to friend of labor since its inception. Switchman Gets Bad Fall.

F. M. Lewis, a switchman in the Union Pacific yards, was knocked off a box car Tuesday afternoon at Ninth and Jackson streets and sustained serious injuries to his apple and right ankie. The accident was caused by a switch engine bumping into a string of cars on which Lewis was standing. Lewis lost his balance and fell backward off the end of the car and was wedged in between two cars, so he could not get out. He was seen to fall by several of the switch crew and was satisfasted from his parlious position on the bumpers hefore the train had started up or he must have been killed. Drs. MacDiarnuid and Schleier were summoned from the police station and after attending to Lewis injuries had him removed to his home. His South Eleventh street. It is feared Lewis sustained internal injuries and that complications may arise.

opening of N street for years. After the condmnation proceedings had been started the court appointed six wellknown real estate men to appraise the property. The appraisers are: Thomas J. O'Neil, Joseph Murphy, L. C. Gibson, F. J. Persons, C. M. Hunt and B. E. Wilcox.

The cost of condemnation proceedings will be assessed to the improvement district when created. Just how large this improvement district will be has not been determined by the city council.

As soon as the property through the Brubaker tract is condemned a petition for the grading of the street will be in order, and then the council will be in position to go ahead with the letting of contracts for the grading. With the grading of this street it is understood that the Burington will build a bridge across its tracks and establish a depot. More than this, the opening of the street will provide a good road to the river, and also add to the value of property on Thirteenth street both north and south of N street

"Buried at Sea" tells the story of a young nan whose parents were rich, and whose father, after giving the son training that fitted him for a position in society, died and left him penniless. The son has the instincts of noble manhood and refuses to marry the girl who loves him because she is rich. He also refuses to marry another rich girs because he doesn't love her. He needs the money, for his mother is dying by inches, but he proposes to earn it by inventing printing presses and the like. (Funny some of these fellows don't get up to the minute and invent a flying machine, or find out how old is Ann, isa't it?) Well, this pair of rich young women decide that they can't keep house without him and while one of them is trying to devise some way of helping the young man she loves and who loves her in return, the other cuts in with a plan whereby she proposes to make him, and that's what started the fuss in the first place. The cousin of the chosen one wants to marry her himself, and he lets himself in on the play with the brungtte party who proposes to have an inventor in the family at any cost. This all comes out in the first act, and the plot for the undoing of the poor but honest young man who has just achieved a stupendous success and doesn't know it, is set on foot It winds its way through two more acts, the third including a destardly piece of work by the villain in the hero's stateroom on board an Atlantic liner, and the solemn service of committing a body to the deep. What Joy there is in Act IV, when the hero, who has been solemnly planted "out of soundings." as they say in the navy, turns up on the English side just in time to stop the wedding of the villain and the girl who loved and was loved by the honest young inventor.

The company having this product of Theodore Kremer's brain in hand is competent, giving life and interest to the several characters and making the play go from first to last. In addition to the heart interest a strong vein of comedy runs through the play, and the laughs are as plentiful as the tears. It is well staged, too. The engagement concludes with a performance this evening

PRISONER TRIES SUICIDE Man in Jail for Being Drunk Nearly Takes His Life with His Suspenders.

One of Turnkey Glover's boarders, John B. Wahlenberg, came very near escaping Wednesday night at 10 o'clock. He did not attempt to get out by the usual way, the door, but tried to make his exit by the strangulation route. He knotted his suspenders and fastened them to the bars of his cell with a large pin, after which he raised himself by holding onto the bars and poked his head through the noose. When found by Officer Rinn there were no signs of life, but by working over him for some time he was finally revived. Wahlenberg was arrested yesterday afternoon by Officer Horne on the charge of drunkenness. He had been very noisy in his cell all the afternoon and evening. About five minutes before he was found suspended Officer Rinn passed his cell, and he made a request to see Mayor Moores, who, he said, would release him if he knew he was in jail. He also made demands to see others, but as he was quite drunk not much attention was paid to his talk. "Blind" Harry Baldwin was being taken into the cell room by Turnkey Glover and Officer Rinn, when they came to Wahlenagainst the bars. The officer whipped out his pocket knife, severed the suspen and allowed the man to fall to the floor. He sustained quite a severe gash on his forehead by the fall. Police Surgeon Mac-Diarmid said that if the officer had not acted as he did, the man would never have been revived, as he was almost dead when the doctor reached him and applied the restoratives which brought him to.

Nothing is known at the jail about Wahlenberg, as he refused to give his address when brought in, and his name does not appear in the city directory.
