WATSON DRS.

M'UGH TELLS WHAT LAW IS

Infirms J. J. Dunn and Others that Police Board Cannot Hunt Up Crime.

POWER ONLY TO DISCIPLINE OFFICIALS

Dunn is Much Excited in His Argument of Demurrer to His Request for Writ of Mandamus.

The demurrer filed by the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners to the mandamus issued by Judge Slaughter in the case of J. J. Dunn and the state of Nebraska against the proprietors of the Diamond saloon, charging them with keeping and operating gambling devices, was argued before Judge Estelle in the criminal division of the district court yesterday.

Arguing to the demurrer, W. D. McHugh, representing the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners, said that the commissioners have simply the power to discipline the mayor and police force, and that the mayor and other executive officials are the persons vested with the power to see that persons against whom complaints have been filed are arrested.

Replying to these arguments, Mr. Dunn said that the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners had not been asked in this suit to go out and make personal investigations against alleged violators of the law, but that where indubitable evidence had been placed before it it was the duty of the commission to order the chief of police to effect the arrest of the persons charged in the complaint in the event the chief had personally and previously refused to do this of his own accord. Dunn then proceeded to exhibit his intimacy with the statutes and supreme court decisions bearing on cases he said were similar.

Powers and Duties of Board.
As indicating and proving the claim that the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners should not be expected to make arrests and in support of his claim that the board has only the power to discipline the mayor, chief of police and others over whom it has the control, Mr. McHugh quoted that section of the statute which provides that "all powers and duties connected with and incident to the appointment, removal, government and discipline of the officers and members of the fire and police departments of the city, under such rules and regulations as may be adopted by the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners shall be vested in and exercised by said board."

Mr. McHugh argued that "there would be many who would be willing to accept the position of fire and police commissioner under the law as he construed it, which was that his duty was simply to discipline the officers over whom it had the control and supervision, but that few could be found who would be willing to accept a position on the board of commissioners. If it were found that the commissioners were to go out and make investigations where complaints had been filed against alleged violators of the law, it was held that the commission had been created in order to relieve the chief of police and the policeman from letting partisan politics play a controlling part with them."

Dunn then got impassioned and made great gyrations over refusal of officers to perform their duties, travesty on justice and a lot of other things.

ONCE AN EXILE IN SIBERIA

Captain Alberti, Who Escapes from Russian Prison Life Describes It.

PORTRAYS HIS FATE AS HORRID DREAM

Declares Ukraine Cheerful Stories Told of Siberia, Which He Insists is Most Desolate of Lands.

Captain Samuel Alberti of Chicago, an escaped Siberian exile, was in Omaha on a short visit, a guest at the Millard. Captain Alberti has passed through a series of thrilling experiences that read like a romance. To a reporter for The Bee he said: "I am an Italian by birth, as you will observe by my name, having been born in Castelmar, near Naples, Italy, on February 13, 1845. When I was 2 years of age my parents removed to Russia, and became Russian subjects in all that the term implies. According to the Russian custom, it was required that I should be educated under Russian supervision and in time I was sent to St. Petersburg and remained several years in the polytechnic school, being educated as a civil engineer. Upon the completion of my course of study I was assigned to a mine in the engineer corps of the Russian army and was first detailed to make a topographical survey of portions of Turkey, where I remained two or three years. Quitting Turkey, I next did service in the engineering department of the Caucasian mountains, where I was advanced to the rank of captain. I had accomplished my allotted term of five years' army service, excepting two months, when a disagreement with one of my superior officers resulted in my being court-martialed, and I was sentenced to do five more years' service in the army. I continued in my rank as captain, but the service was extremely galling, and I determined to make my escape. This was in 1875. Service in the Russian army, mind you, is almost as severe as slavery, no matter what your rank may be. I succeeded in escaping from Caucasus and made my way to Odessa. My uniform acted as a passport and through the influence of some Masonic friends I was enabled to reach Constantinople.

Three Years in Siberia.

"In the interim of my second period of service I had been sent to the Kara mines in Siberia, where I served for three years as an engineer and for two years as an exile transporter. After my escape from the Russian service I went from Constantinople to Liverpool, and from there to Mexico. The vessel on which I sailed was wrecked off the West Indies and I was picked up by a passing vessel, and through the aid of good friends I was later enabled to reach New York. I went into the decoration business there and later returned to Chicago, arriving there in 1880. In 1883 I was advised of the death of relatives in the province of Kurland and that I was an heir to considerable of their property. Having been absent from Russia for eighteen years, and having become an American citizen, armed with a passport I left for Russia. Arriving in Kurland in due time, I met with no interruption for some time. However, during the negotiations for the disposition of a part of my inheritance my identity became known through the system of Russian espionage, and I was arrested one night and thrown into prison. My passport was taken from me and I was denied the opportunity to consult with the American consul, and without trial I was hurriedly hustled off to Siberia. At Nij Novgorod one of the officers, more humane than others, discovering that I was a Mason, came to my relief and had the leg chains taken off me and I was placed in the floating hospital and for a while given the best of care.

"I need not weary you with the details of the awful months of the march to the mines and our subsequent treatment there. It is like a horrid dream. We were chained together like beasts and had to march closely together, and when lagging through fatigue were fished with whips. When some unfortunate would fall down from exhaustion, if not dead, he would be dragged along like a log.

Never See Daylight.

"The prisoners convicted of serious crimes were never permitted above ground at all. As my crime was not a severe one, and owing to my education, I was after a time given work in the engineer department and was sent farther south, and where, biding my time, I eventually escaped through the aid of friends and again made my way to Odessa, where I again sailed for Constantinople and thence to America.

"I cannot advise naturalized Americans from Russia to return to their mother countries. That America is overrun with Russian spies and detectives is almost certain.

"I must disagree with some of the stories that are written about the wonderful capabilities of Siberia. It is the most desolate country on the globe, and I have been over pretty much all of it. The popular idea of Siberia is obtained from the southern country lying along the Transiberian railroad, but that is but a very insignificant part of Siberia and merely fringes along China and through the inhabited portions.

"Siberia alone is twice as large as the United States and nine-tenths of the country lies for 3,000 miles north of the Transiberian railway, and millions and millions of acres are uninhabitable and will always be so. The only inhabitants are a few nomadic tribes and the exiles, and so vast is the country that the average of population in the whole of Siberia will not reach one human being to each 100 miles area of the country, including the cities and towns along the southern border."

Captain Alberti is lecturing through the country and left yesterday for Pender, where he lectures.

WATCH ALL NIGHT IN VAIN
Police Faithfully Guard Corner Where Depredations Were Expected and Rain Falls Down.

A report that there might be strenuous doings in the vicinity of Nineteenth and Mason streets, where the Great Western railroad has acquired land for a terminal site, was sent to the police by Mayor Moore Saturday night. Only a portion of the original report is on file, and it says something about an attempt to burn certain of the buildings now on the ground, which might or might not be made, and a request was made that the police station man at that street corner be on watch. Although believing the affair to be the outgrowth of somebody's "Hallow'en joke," the police kept men there all night.

Officer Neilson remained at the street corner throughout his shift, or until 12 o'clock, and was relieved by another officer, who kept up the vigil until morning. No one with incendiary motive came. The lone watchmen kept their silent vigil all during the wet night for naught, not even being rewarded by a single visitor with whom to chatter away a few of the lone-some hours.

A Rose by any other name would smell as sweet, and Champagne--well, buy Cook's Imperial.
