

ESTABLISHED JUNE 19, 1871.

OMAHA, SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 8, 1903—THIRTY-SIX PAGES.

SINGLE COPY FIVE CENTS.

DREYFUS HAS HOPES

Too Busy Preparing for Revision Hearing to Accept Social Invitations.

NEW EVIDENCE ON WHICH HE RELIES

Only Photograph of Alleged Bordereau Submitted to the Court.

NOTHING TO PROVE EVER EXISTED

Confessions of Schwarzkoppin and Esterhazy Also to Be Urged.

HAS LETTER OF LETTER TO HIS LAWYER

Many New Facts and Documents Which Would Admit of a Re-hearing of the Famous Case.

(Copyright, 1903, by Press Publishing Co.)

PARIS, Nov. 7.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—Captain Dreyfus, in declining an invitation received from Marchesson Arconat to spend some time at the castle of Gascogne, gave as an excuse that he was obliged to remain in Paris owing to his work relative to the revision of his case.

The world correspondent asked Joseph Reinach if he knew what decision had been taken in regard to the demand for a revision, addressed by Dreyfus to the minister of war Mr. Reinach answered:

"In regard to the minister of war, I can only cite the incidents occurring in the Chamber last April, when General Andre explained his position about the re-examination of the famous bordereau with annotations by the German emperor, though only an alleged photograph of this false piece of evidence had been seen by any of the officers, while others, knowing nothing of their own knowledge, were convinced of its existence owing to persistent representations to this effect by certain papers."

There is also the letter that Deputy Jaures received from Demutier, with the formal statement of the relations of Colonel Schwarzkoppen, who finished by confessing to his superior, together with Esterhazy.

There is also Esterhazy's letter to his lawyer, Maistre Cabanne, with the declaration that the bordereau never was in the hands of Colonel Schwarzkoppen and arrived intact and unopened at the ministry of war. This letter is in my possession.

You will thus see that there are many new facts and documents which would admit of the law permitting a revision on the ground of judicial error. Dreyfus being pardoned is no prevention of revision of his case. The soldier was pardoned long before the court granted his appeal for revision.

The only question would be the application or non-application of the sentence eventually pronounced by the tribunal before the appeal is decided. On this point contrary opinions prevail."

The Humberts' appeal has been refused. The appeal was based on the assertion that the assuming of a false name caused prejudice to nobody, that the insertion of the name of Crawford in the inert papers was not a forgery, and that the post office employes in testifying were guilty of a breach of professional etiquette. He the Humberts must remain in prison.

DAILY MAIL MAKES NEW RECORD

Remarkable Achievement in Reporting and Printing Chamberlain's Speech.

(Copyright, 1903, by Press Publishing Co.)

LONDON, Nov. 7.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—The fastest speech reported in record over an equal distance was achieved Wednesday night by the Evening News, which is owned by the Harnsworth company. By means of an etrophone from Hingley hall in Birmingham Joseph Chamberlain's speech was taken down by stenographers in the Evening News office in London, fully 135 feet off, and the report was on sale in the street twenty-seven minutes after Mr. Chamberlain finished.

Though this was a remarkable journalistic feat, pointing to the immensely useful development of the etrophone in the future, that instrument is not yet perfected for such a purpose. When Mr. Chamberlain was speaking straight before him his words were clearly audible, but when he turned to one side they became indistinct, and clearing and other interruptions from the audience blurred them. Mr. Chamberlain spoke eighty minutes. Fifteen minutes after he spoke his last word the speech was in type in London.

Mr. Harnsworth has adopted another novel method of advertising his Daily Mail. A member of his staff is booked for lectures throughout the United Kingdom on the "Romance of a Newspaper." He will recount the history of the Daily Mail and show the inside working of the different departments.

CLEVER WOMAN HELPS ALONG

Mrs. George Keppel Secures Promotion in Cabinet of Graham Murray.

(Copyright, 1903, by Press Publishing Co.)

LONDON, Nov. 7.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—None ever among the remarkable series of make-shifts by which Arthur Balfour reconstructed his cabinet caused more surprise than the promotion of Graham Murray, the principal law officer for Scotland, (he advocates as they call him), to the cabinet office of secretary of state for Scotland. The transferring of a law officer to a purely political post is unusual, as promotion is provided in the profession. But the mystery was made plain to many by the fact that Mr. Murray is married to the only sister of Mrs. George Keppel, and that he has been anxious for some time to get political preferment instead of legal, as he is very wealthy, apart from his professional income. He is also an ardent golf player, and when the king needed instruction in the game it was afforded by Graham Murray, as the introduction of his sister-in-law, Mrs. George Keppel.

POINTS THE ROAD TO DEATH

One of Most Beautiful Bridges in Paris the Favorite Resort of Those Bent on Suicide.

(Copyright, 1903, by Press Publishing Co.)

PARIS, Nov. 7.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—Paris, the city of monuments, has one grim monument which is a veritable rendezvous of death. This is the Pont des Arts over the Seine which has pointed the way to the valley of the shadow to so many that it has come to be known as the bridge of suicides. All strangers are shown the cafe of the dead, where skull and crossbones and the gruesome symbols of the grave are the fantastic decoration. It is a play upon horrors. But few have pointed out to them the grim reality, the bridge where hundreds have sought the surcease of sorrow.

It is not easy to divine the reason why people bent on self-destruction choose this spot. It is a wonderfully picturesque view point and the last fleeting glimpse of earth is fair enough to make even the desperate repent their rash courage. It is of iron and steel, and its flights of steps leading up to it from the quay. Beyond it towers Notre Dame and the delicate spire of Sainte Chaboule. One end leads toward the Louvre, the other to the colonnade of the Louvre, all of gray, outlined against a French sky as gray as lead. About it goes on the traffic of the quays—the selling of old prints and books that have passed through many hands.

There the suicides go—some to fling themselves from the height of its iron balustrade, others to crutch under it and drop silently in the green Seine; yet others run wildly down the stone stairs to the docks and dive head foremost into the water.

The Parisians are inured to suicide. It is the thing to do if one is disappointed in love or money, and it is just as much the fashion with the butcher boys, waiters and seamstresses as with the "headlights" of the fashionable world. The other day an old woman, wretchedly dressed, hardly dressed at all in fact, leaped not to drop into the green Seine, but to pull her out. The crowd that followed her was fending. The people ran and danced gleefully, as if it were a fête day, some fifty of them that gloomy tragedy in a poor, frail, ragged, old woman trying to finish with life because she lacked the strength to snatch her daily bread from a cruel world.

BRINGS SUIT FOR MILLIONS

Princess Radzewill Commences Action Against Estate of Cecil Rhodes.

(Copyright, 1903, by Press Publishing Co.) LONDON, Nov. 7.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—Princess Catherine Radzewill (who was subsequently confounded with Princess Albert Radzewill, nee Milmo, of Monterey, Mexico), has had one of the most sensational careers of the century. Russian by birth, she for many years was a secret diplomatic spy in the pay of the Czar. She was introduced to the late Cecil Rhodes, a highly connected woman of great ability who might be useful in his aggrandizing scheme. She set London by the ears four years ago by declaring that $200,000 worth of jewels had been stolen from her room at Capetown in the Rhodes interest with his money and shortly before his death she was accused and convicted of forging his name to bills for $25,000 and was sentenced to two years' detention.

Now, on arriving in England she has begun suit for $7,000,000 against the trustees of Cecil Rhodes' estate. This sum represents commissions and claims for alleged services rendered to Mr. Rhodes. She asserts that her conviction in Capetown was procured by fraud by the suppressing of essential evidence and owing to the fact that the prosecutor in Rhodes interest with his money and shortly before his death she was accused and convicted of forging his name to bills for $25,000 and was sentenced to two years' detention.

DURAND TO SAIL THIS MONTH

New Ambassador to Washington Kindly Remembered by Englishmen in Madrid.

(Copyright, 1903, by Press Publishing Co.) MADRID, Nov. 7.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—Sir Mortimer Durand, the British ambassador here, who has been transferred to Washington, informed the World correspondent yesterday expected to sail from England for New York November 21, or at the latest November 23. His wife and daughter will follow later. Sir Mortimer postponed his departure from Madrid until yesterday on account of the illness of his daughter, who on Thursday to present his letters of recall.

The British colony presented an address, to which Durand replied that he certainly was much pleased at being appointed to Washington, though he regretted to depart from the colony, whose members had given him so much sympathy and support. He expressed gratitude for the king's appreciation of his efforts. Lady Durand and her daughter also expressed warmly their appreciation for a basket of lovely silver, a gold table and a clock given by the women of the colony.

DISCOVER ROYAL JEWELRY

That Taken from Murdered King and Queen Found in Palace Garden.

(Copyright, 1903, by Press Publishing Co.) BELGRADE, Serbia, Nov. 7.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—The jewelry stolen from the murdered king and queen has been unearthed from a deserted part of the old palace garden. Several bracelets, a diamond diadem, a locket containing a miniature of the king and three other jewels were found. The thickest discovery was a decomposed finger with the exceedingly valuable ring King Alexander always wore, which had disappeared. The jewels, wrapped in a piece of waterproof, were found by two of the king's servants who were caught offering to sell a bracelet and then surrendered the remainder.

POWER OF GREAT MIND

Joseph Chamberlain is Making Great Headway in His Campaign.

(Copyright, 1903, by Press Publishing Co.)

LONDON, Nov. 7.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—Joseph Chamberlain's protectionist campaign is affording a marvellous demonstration of his personal power and talents—some say as a demagogue. Although all the great fiscal authorities, including five ex-chancellors of the exchequer (two being from his own party), are against him, he steadily is consolidating the overwhelming bulk of the tory forces around his banner. He is even making headway with the working classes in the teeth of the solemn warnings of their leaders that the result of his policy must hit them most sorely by enhancing the cost of the necessities of life.

The intellectual element of toryism is hostile to him. The Quarterly Review, the highest expression of tory tradition, characterizes his speeches as "rhetorical bunkum."

His figures are contradicted, his arguments are assailed, his logic and his whole case is covered with ridicule without affecting him or his following. He calmly ignores every exposure and retorts nothing, however glaring. His only apparent recognition of his alleged misdeeds and muddling of statistics is implied in his devoting himself now mainly to appeals to sentiment, to anti-foreign prejudice—to precisely the same strata of thought and feeling he so successfully touched when working up the South African war fever.

Every one who differs from him, even unionists like Sir Michael Hicks Beach, who were intimately associated with his previous essays in jingoism, he stigmatizes as anti-patriot, and this scheme is unmistakably telling with the country.

His opponents are painfully realizing that the tory free traders are being driven to combine with the liberals in an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat. Two months ago this was regarded as impossible.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

BRIDE MAY COST A THRONE

Grand Duke Cyril of Russia to Renounce Claim to Wied His Cousin.

(Copyright, 1903, by Press Publishing Co.)

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 7.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—Grand Duke Cyril of Russia has dared a good deal in betrothing himself to his cousin, the Princess Victoria of Saxe-Coburg. She formerly was the wife of the grand duke of Hesse, also her cousin, with whom she arranged a divorce on the ground of incompatibility, by mutual consent. That marriage was not a happy one. The grand duke is an easy going, rather pliant individual, whereas the grand duchess is a bundle of nerves and, like all three daughters of the duke of Edinburgh, possessed of the strongest will imaginable.

Her sister, the crown princess of Rumania, makes no pretense of showing any deference or attention to her husband, who apparently is quite satisfied as long as he is left alone to his books and his dreams. The Princess Victoria is a daring horse-woman and when driving a four-in-hand with perfect mastery she is utterly unconventional.

The Grand Duke Cyril, between whom and the empress there are only three living individuals, whose name too robust young fellow, but he has become completely captivated by his dashing cousin, and even if he is cut off from the succession he declares his firm resolve to marry her. He is the eldest son of the Grand Duke Vladimir.

IRELAND'S COLORS POPULAR

Paris Fashion Set the Rage for Green in All the Smart Costumes.

(Copyright, 1903, by Press Publishing Co.)

PARIS, Nov. 7.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—It is just as if Paddy had invaded "Gay Paree" this autumn, for the stylish Parisian dames are conspicuously flaunting his colors on every hand. All the shops, big and little, are exhibiting the latest "Confection" touched up with green. The "smart" ladies on the Rue de la Paix, have a bit of it in their hats, a shade of it on their evening gowns. The "chic" sewing girls of Felix, Worth and Paquin have a bit of it stuck somewhere to show you they're in the swim too. If there comes a sudden gale of wind—and there are none too few these days even in the city of supposedly blue skies—it is revealed likewise that the Parisian dames and damsels are wearing old Ireland's colors in their "smart" petticoats.

The fashionable winter hat will be of white or light colored felt, with a very long, broad brim, and a band of silver lace, or feathers, or trimmings with gold or silver lace, and pampilles flowers are used, but sparingly. The modistes, however, are prodigal with feathers. For grand functions large toques in golden silver or light colored tulle or gauze are the proper thing.

Every one who differs from him, even unionists like Sir Michael Hicks Beach, who were intimately associated with his previous essays in jingoism, he stigmatizes as anti-patriot, and this scheme is unmistakably telling with the country.

His opponents are painfully realizing that the tory free traders are being driven to combine with the liberals in an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat. Two months ago this was regarded as impossible.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

His organization is spending with a lavish hand money which has been secretly acquired. Sir Ernest Cassel is said to have given $250,000, with a promise of further munificent contributions. But Mr. Chamberlain's chief financial backers are believed to be the Rand millionaires, whose financial interest in Rhodes is an effort to force a dissolution of Parliament at the earliest moment as the only hope of saving themselves from defeat.

PRESIDENT MAY ACT

Secretary of State Believes that He Has Power to Conclude Treaty.

(Copyright, 1903, by Press Publishing Co.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—The secretary of state believes that he has power to conclude a treaty with Panama. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate.

He is confident that he can secure the necessary ratification of the Senate. He is confident