Superintendent Pearce Says He Needs More Help at Once.

BOARD BALKS AT INEXPERIENCED GIRLS

List of Nine Names Submitted by Resolution is Laid Over for One Meeting, Although Endorsed by Superintendent.

That the school district of Omaha is short of available teachers was the statement made at the Board of Education last night in connection with a resolution that would permit nine young women who have not had the required outside experience to take positions in the local schools.

The resolution in question was presented by the committee on teachers on examinations and was adopted by the board.

Member Rice immediately offered opposition to the measure and said that the schools are for the purpose of educating pupils, not teachers.

Member McIntosh took the same stand, saying that many rooms in the local schools were becoming crowded and that unexperienced girls should go to districts outside where the work is lighter.

Just before this resolution was presented the same committee submitted a proposed change to the rules that would admit any person to teach in the Omaha schools without an examination.

The board authorized the purchase of 252 school desks of varying sizes from the Superior Manufacturing company of Muskegon, Mich., for $1,070.

Transit Officer Parker reported that he had caught forty-one truants during October, had sent ninety-eight children under 15 years to school and had cleared fifteen arrests of parents for non-compliance with the compulsory education laws.
