SQUABBLE OVER FIRE ENGINE

Dispute Between Mayor and Council Thought to Be Pivoting Out.

CONCILIATION IS NOW LOOKED FOR

Mayor and Sixteen Business Men Offer Over Six Thousand Dollar Fund Toward Purchase of Engine.

The fire engine apparatus squabble at the city hall is simmering, but is not being cooked in quite so hot a fire as a few days ago.

While the council has officially taken the matter of buying an engine into its own hands and ignored the advisory board, yet the move is looked upon more in the nature of a bluff than as a determined plan of action.

Legal opinion favors Mayor Moore in his contention that the advisory board is the sole branch of the municipal government that can advertise and make a contract for the engine and other fire-fighting supplies.

It is considered likely at the city hall that the mayor and council will arrange an amicable settlement of the dispute, as neither the board nor the legislative body can move alone in the premises.

While the Not Fire Engine company has offered to rent the city a third-class steam engine, the largest it has on hand, the American Fire Engine company has offered to let it an extra first size, the dimensions of the engine which all parties to the controversy agree should be bought.

The council has delegated authority to rent the Not engine to the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners, but doubt exists as to their right to proceed. All resolutions concerning the fire engine deal adopted by the council Tuesday night are concurrent, will be vetoed by the mayor, it is given out, and must come up again Tuesday night.

The mayor has said that he has $5,000 subscribed by himself and sixteen business men to buy the type of engine he wants, but, realizing that he cannot do this legally, he prefers to attempt diplomacy and concessions in dealing with the council.
