

ABOUT PLAYS PLAYERS AND PLAYHOUSES

Christmas has passed, and the managers having heaved the proper sigh of relief, are now looking forward with some little expectancy, mingled with apprehension, to the remainder of the season.

Everything is done with a rush in these times, and thinking too often follows doing. One cannot help wishing that the reverse could be tried for a while.

William H. Crane is one of those rare actors who can make any old part of a piece seem good. It is hardly worth while to debate the why and wherefore of this; the condition is sufficiently attractive to warrant letting alone.

Coming Events. Mason & Mason, in the farce comedy, "Rudolph and Adolph," will be seen this afternoon and tonight at the Boyd.

Charles B. Hanford will be seen at the Boyd Thursday night in a big spectacular revival of Richard III.

Quaker Maid Rye. Highest Grade of Whiskey. Perfection of age, purity of flavor, are its winning qualities.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

The close of the year. Does it not seem to you that the last few days of the year are fraught with thoughts of sadness more than any other days?

These ember days are full of reflection. They are tinged with a softened light which comes through the glass windows of memory.

Mr. Simms, organist and chorister of All Saints' church, played with a good deal of fire on Friday evening last.

Roasts National Theater. French Critic Does Not Like Class of Performances Given at the House.

Mr. Crane's present play is unworthy and yet by force of his own effort he makes it a success. He has the assistance of several very capable people, who follow the leader in the way of making the most of the little opportunity they find in the parts they have, and succeed in making the piece acceptable.
