Actorney for Stors Company Promises to Press Action Against Every Other Saloon in the City

Injunctions against the Stors Brewing empany's saloons in this city were not issued yesterday by Judge Thornell of the district court, but it is likely that they will be some time today. On the cases being called in court attorneys for Mrs. Maggie Buck, the ostensible owner of the buildings in which the Storz company's saloons are located, moved to have the suits against the saloons at the corner of Broadway and Scott streets and Broadway and Tenth streets removed to the federal court on the grounds that Mrs. Buck was a nonresident of the state of Iowa.

This was opposed by Attorney Benjamin, who appears as plaintiff in the injunction sults against the Storz company's saloons, he contending that the action to restrain the sale of liquor contrary to the mulct law was in fact the enforcement of a penal statute and therefore not transferable to the federal court like an ordinary equity or law cause would be.

Judge Thornell in taking this question advisement said that his decision function suit was an enforcement of a penal statute and that he was inclined to the light, owing to the change in laws and opinion that it was. In view of the court's rules. marks it is believed that the injunctions will be granted in the six cases pending today and that the removal of the two to the federal court will be denied.

As soon as Attorney Benjamin secures his injunctions Attorney Wadsworth, representing the Storz company's interests, will retaliate by asking from the court similar restraining orders against every other saloon in the city, and what the final outcome will be no one seems able to foretell.

These transfers were filed yesterday in the abstract, title and loan office of Squire & Annis, 101 Pearl street:

Expects Omaha to Help. Alderman Casper announced yesterday hat he had a scheme for securing the necessary funds with which to improve West Broadway, but that he was keeping it under his hat for the present, as he was not as yet prepared to make public the details and he wished to think over it further.

"All I ask," he said, "is that the city council shall stand back of me in the matter," and then explained that his contemplated donations from Omaha sufficient to cover a large part of the cost. How he expected to secure the money from across the river, however, Alderman Casper declined to say. To repave a strip sixteen feet wide in Broadway from Thirteenth street to the approach to the motor company's bridge, Alderman Casper estimated would cost from $25,000 to $30,000, and of this amount he said he expected from $12,900 to $15,000 would be contributed by Omaha parties, Mr. Casper said it was possible that he
