PERRY HEATH ON STAND

Former First Assistant Postmaster General Testifies in Machen Case.

FOLLOWS HIS SUCCESSOR IN OFFICE

Both Admit that There is Much Done of Which They Have Little Knowledge but Formally Approve.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Robert J. Wynne, first assistant postmaster general who was on the stand when court adjourned over on Wednesday today continued his testimony in the postal trial.

On cross-examination by Mr. Kumler, the witness said he did not know whether Groff fasteners were attached to rural free delivery letter boxes or not.

Concerning the influence of senators and representatives in postal affairs, Mr. Wynne said that congressmen have complained of slowness in establishing free delivery routes.

The witness was asked by Mr. Maddox, for the defense, to identify an order of the department, dated February 5, 1903, addressed to Groff Bros.

On recross-examination Wynne said that his chief clerk, Howley, would have the right to use a rubber stamp. He said he had left one of three stamps in Machen's division, but not after December, 1902, with his knowledge or consent.

Perry Heath on Stand. Perry S. Heath, former first assistant postmaster general, then took the stand. He testified to his service in the department from March, 1897, to July, 1900, and said he knew of the Groff fastener, which had been adopted and was in use when he entered the office.

He was shown an order for fasteners with his name attached and promptly said: "That's my name and my signature, but I see it is signed with a rubber stamp."

On cross-examination Mr. Heath was led through a number of questions, the fact being brought out that in Machen's division subordinate prepared certain papers for Machen's initials.

Attorney Douglas objected to the admission of papers such as had been offered in evidence, saying the government had no foundation for its charge of conspiracy.

Demand for Proof of Conspiracy. He demanded that the government now produce its evidence of conspiracy and conspiracy to defraud, so as to connect Machen with specific knowledge of the transactions referred to.

Cross-examined by Mr. Douglas, Mr. Heath said that after an article had been adopted by the department and its price fixed, and it had become a standard article of supply, the signing of requisitions would be a matter of routine.

WIDENS UNITED STATES LINES

Senate Committee Desires More Power on Isthmus in Connection with Canal.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The senate committee on foreign relations today adopted an amendment to the Panama canal treaty giving to the United States partial jurisdiction over the harbors of Colon and Panama in order to protect the shipping interests of this country.

The amendment, it is believed, will not meet with any opposition from the republicans of Panama. The republican members of the committee are inclined to favor a few minor amendments to the treaty, if for the only purpose of bringing about the ratification of the convention by the constitutional convention of the new republic.

The amendment adopted by the committee provides that the United States shall have the right to dredge and improve the harbors at Panama and Colon and this government shall have control of the harbors for this purpose and for making them suitable for all conditions of commerce.

DEBATE GORMAN RESOLUTION

Senator Teller Opposes the Doctrine of Might Makes Right.

SPONNER'S REPLY OCCASIONS LAUGHTER

Intimates that Republican Form of Government in Panama is at Heart Equal to that in Colorado.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The senate today passed a bill authorizing the county of Poinsett, in the state of Arkansas, to construct a bridge across the St. Francis river. Other bills passed:

Extending to the ports of Spokane, Bellingham, Blaine, Sumas and Nelson, in the state of Washington, the privileges of the act of June 16, 1880, governing the immediate transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement.

The Gorman Panama resolution was then laid before the senate. Before anyone was recognized to speak on the resolution Mr. Gorman offered a number of amendments, striking out the word "intervention" wherever it appears, thus modifying the resolution so as to make it an inquiry of the president concerning the use of American military forces in the isthmus of Panama.

Mr. Cullom, in view of the amendments, withdrew his motion to refer the resolution to the committee on foreign relations and said he was willing to have it voted upon.

Mr. Lodge, however, asked to have the resolution as amended printed and lie over for another day, and an order was made by Mr. Teller that the resolution be printed.

Mr. Teller then addressed the senate on the canal question, saying that he believed the subject should be treated from a nonpartisan standpoint. He thought, however, that whenever the president transcended his duty the fact should be pointed out.

In the present instance he did not doubt the good intentions of the president, but he was distrustful of his wisdom in what he had done.

He had no complaint to make against Panama, for he thought the people of that country had the right to enter upon a revolution. Indeed, he thought he had lived in Panama he would have been a rebel himself.

Mr. Teller declared, had not been met in Panama. He did not believe with great rapidity from scraps from a rag bag, will be shown by the Auer and the kinodrome pictures will be new and timely.

Mr. Teller interrupted to say that he had been misunderstood, and desired to explain. He said he had meant to say that it would have been preferable for the United States to tell Colombia to get off the isthmus entirely than for the United States to pursue there the methods of sneakthief and maintain the attitude of a bully.

In response to a suggestion made by Mr. Teller, Mr. Spooner interrupted to say that by the treaty of 1846 Colombia was bound to maintain the perpetuity of the United States to pass across the isthmus and he argued that that right remains even though Colombia does not stand behind it.

Mr. Teller replied that he had not yet been able to give his assent to that doctrine, which he understood it meant that when a weak nation had what a strong nation needed, the latter might take it by means of arms if necessary.

Mr. Teller referred to Mr. Tilden's characterization of the situation on the isthmus, the latter interrupted to say that he had been misunderstood, and desired to explain.

Mr. Teller declared, had not been met in Panama. He did not believe with great rapidity from scraps from a rag bag, will be shown by the Auer and the kinodrome pictures will be new and timely.

of necessity, are we to say that there is not an international way of necessity where the interests of the world are concerned? There were interruptions at this point, which caused Mr. Tilden to remark that "it takes a great many doctines to bring about the birth of this baby."

Mr. Teller took issue with the president's declaration that the course pursued in Panama had been in the interest of "collective civilization." That, he said, was a dangerous doctrine, and was just such a doctrine as Russia might appeal to if she should attempt to crush Japan.

Mr. Teller then ceased speaking the senate passed a large number of pension bills and at 4:22 p. m. adjourned until Monday.

In one of our Omaha dailies of Wednesday there appeared a seven inch column curio with the heading: "A Voice From Abroad."

Trading Stamps are NEVER given away. They cost retail merchants 50 cents per hundred. No honest man can continue giving $1.05 for $1.00.

Not! Not if you want to squeeze 28 per cent out of your customers, as indicated by your official organ of December 19th, in which it is pointed out in a three page article that the retail grocer cannot do business on less than 28 per cent, and, therefore, cannot afford to give Trading Stamps.
