They must become right, whether it please the railroads or not. A fight may be necessary, but if it is we will enter the contest with good nature-but there shall be a grain exchange, with mills and elevators doing business. We all hope that this may be brought about peaceably and all forces WRIGHT IS NOW GOVERNOP to that end will be used, but everything will be done for the upbuilding of the great city in which we have made our homes Start out fairly, I say again, to the ele ment-the producing element on which we all rely for success." President Wattles made the first trade, offering 5,000 bushels of corn from his cribs Wright and Vice Governor Henry C. Ide for May delivery. N. B. Updike offered 39 cents for it. W. C. Sunderland raised him to the half and Mr. Updike made it 40 cents. Hant military pageant, about 3,000 troops A. B. Jaquith was on the point of doing something better, but was caught under the hammer. Mr. Updike took the corn for W. H. Furguson of Lincoln.

The exchange business was not opened antil 10 o'clock because the juice for the ticker had not found its way along the new cord, nor had the samples arrived. The big blackboard was ready, however, showing the Chicago market, that at Kansas City, St. Louis, Minneapólis, Duluth, New York and-the newest but not least-Omaha. A large weather bureau weather map and six Tennessee marble-topped tables for the grain samples completed the furniture. The Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies had desks beside the entrance. The exchange offices communicated through double doors with the floor.

McWhorter Opens Bids.

Vice President 8. A. McWhorter made the first bids to start the Omaha market, 40 Capture Ammunition and Cause Sericents for May corn being chalked up, 75 cents for May wheat and 70 cents for July wheat. At 10:66 o'clock he had requests from all the other markets for the first Omaha quotations. In the total receipts chalked up sixty-seven cars of wheat came to Omaha, thirty-two went to Chicago and 101 to Kansas City. In corn Omaha received eighty-nine cars, as against 358 for Chicago the insurgents have met with a reverse at and sixty-six for Kansas City. Oats were San Ramon. in the same order-thirty-five, 189 and seven

When business opened more than 100 men were in the call hall. These included representatives of all the elevator and grain companies doing business in the city, stockholders and officers of the exchange not grain men, railroad men and other spectators. Local roads had representatives present.

W. J. C. Kenyon represented the stock yards. A. H. Farnum of the Harris-Gates company from the Chicago Board of Trade was here. He said:

"You have made a good start. I came out here to see what you had. I think Omaha has every chance to build up a large market in grain. The city has unlimfted amounts of grain tributary to it. Then there are the railroads centering here. Chicago recognizes that Omaha will become a very important grain center."

Firms showing samples of grain were Twamley & Son. Merriam & Holmquist, Omaha Elevator company, Updike Grain company and the Transmississippi Grain company.
