ADMIT CHECKS ARE FORGERIES.

McCreary Implicates John L. Price.

Whom He Says Wrote the Checks.

David W. McCreary, arrested Monday night at Council Bluffs, has admitted that to which the name of M. T. Sullivan, a well known Broadway saloonkeeper has been forged, on Chris Hansen, proprietor of the Oak saloon, and with attempting to pass a similar bogus check on M. Marcus, the clothier, when placed in the award yesterday morning admitted knowing that the checks were forgeries and implicated John L. Price in the deal. He told the officers that Price had written the checks and given them to him to pass. In addition to the check passed on Chris Hansen, McCreary said he had passed one on $25 on W. W. Waters, a clerk at the saloon at 36 West Broadway. The check passed on Weinberg bore the signature of James Carson, a fictitious person.

Price, who is somewhat of a well known character about the city and claims to be a real estate dealer, was arrested, Weinberg having first admitted knowing him and McCreary. Price denied ever having seen the checks before his arrest but admitted he knew McCreary and had been in his company Saturday and Monday. In explanation of his being in company with McCreary, Price said that McCreary had the recipe for taking scales from boilers and that he was assisting McCreary to dispose of the composition.

In view of McCreary's statement and a similarity of the handwriting on the checks with that of Price, which was shown in a letter of introduction found on McCreary and signed by Price, Judge Scott decided to hold Price to the grand jury on the two charges of uttering the forged check which was passed on Hansen and the one passed on Hansen. In default of bail at $50 in each case, Price was committed to the county jail.

McCreary secured a continuance of his case until Saturday. He is a boilermaker by trade and has been a resident of Council Bluffs for upwards of twenty years, but since his wife secured a divorce from him has not, it is said, had any settled home or steady employment.

CHANEY TELLS OF MURDER

Expresses Opinion Rogers is One of Two Men Who Did the Shooting.

STORY SAME AS TOLD TO THE CORONER

Ex-Sheriff Cousins and Physicians Who Made the Postmortem Examination Also Placed on the Stand.

James Chaney, a former Omaha hack-driver, was the principal witness yesterday in the trial of W. C. Rogers, charged with the murder of Bert Forney, the Broadway saloon keeper. Chaney was, according to his story, playing cards with Forney at the time he was shot and as far as he knows was the only eye witness of the crime. His testimony was substantially the story he told to the shooting before the coroner's inquest. Chaney did not want to tell his story of the crime attracted a large crowd, especially during the afternoon, and every available inch of standing room in the court was occupied, a number of women being accommodated with seats inside the railing.

Chaney was asked if he could identify the prisoner as one of the two bandits who entered Forney's saloon on the night of April 3 and shot Forney to death. Chaney answered that Rogers was in his best judgment one of the two bandits and the man who fired the first shot. He said that while he was not personally acquainted with Rogers he had seen him at the saloon frequently seen him in Omaha during the fall of 1902. He described the position of the two bandits, the lower part of whose faces were covered with handkerchiefs, when the first shot was fired and Forney jumped from his seat and started to run toward the door. Chaney said he did not think the first shot was directed at him or Forney, but merely to emphasize the demand for them to hold up their hands. The second and third shots, both of which struck Forney, he said, were fired in rapid succession, and on the third shot Forney fell to the floor inside the doorway leading into the side hall. Not over five or six seconds elapsed, he said, between the firing of the first and third shots.

Although at first apparently somewhat nervous Chaney proved a good witness and gave his testimony clearly and without hesitation. He was subjected to a lengthy and direct cross-examination by counsel for the defense failed to make him change his testimony in the slightest particular.

Ex-Sheriff Cousins' Story.

The first witness placed on the stand by the state when court convened yesterday morning was ex-Sheriff Cousins. He said he was standing at the corner of Tenth street and Broadway in company with his visiting friends and some friends who had been visiting them, when he heard a shot. After seeing his daughter on a car which was approaching he hastened in the direction of the shooting and noticed three men running across Broadway at Eleventh street past the Forney saloon. At the time he supposed they were running toward the place where the shot had been fired and inferred that the shooting had taken place on the south side instead of on the north side of the street. As he was approaching Eleventh street he met Chaney, who had run across to the resort conducted by his wife on the north side of the street and returned to the saloon. Chaney informed the sheriff where the shooting was and said, "They've killed Bert." Cousins then told of entering the saloon, which he found deserted, and the discovery of Forney's dead body in the doorway of the side hall with a revolver between his feet. This, however, he said, had not been discharged, but was subsequently identified as having belonged to the murdered man. The cash register was undisturbed and there had evidently been no attempt to rob the place after Forney had been shot.

Following Mr. Cousins, City Engineer Elyne was placed on the stand. He testified to the measurements of the day following the shooting of the interior of the saloon showing the direction, height of the bullet hole through the stove and into the wall and other such data.

Dan O'Leary, employed as porter in the saloon, testified as to the location of the tables, chairs, stove and other furniture in the place.

Coroner Trevnor and Dr. M. A. Tinley, who made a post mortem examination of Forney's body, testified as to the location of the wounds and the finding of the two bullets. The bullet which caused the fatal wound in the chest was weighed by them and was found to weigh 128 grains. One of the bullets taken from Rogers' revolver and weighed by them weighed 200 grains with the grease on it.

Rogers' Revolver in Court.

Chief of Police Tibbitts was the last witness for the day. He testified to searching Rogers when the latter was arrested by Detective Callaghan and to the finding of the revolver tucked under his waistband in front of him in his pocket. He said he examined the gun and found that three of the chambers bore evidence of having been recently discharged. Counsel for the defense tried to show that when Rogers was searched there was a receipt for the revolver among his papers but that same had been since destroyed or hidden. Chief Tibbitts testified that he did not remember seeing any such paper among Rogers' effects.

After Chief Tibbitts had identified the revolver taken from Rogers, the weapon was handed Rogers' attorney to inspect. Rogers began to handle the weapon but he had no sooner got hold of it than Deputy Sheriff McCaffrey was at his back watching his every move until he laid down the gun. While it was in his possession Rogers took the gun apart and closely examined it with the aid of a lighted match. This incident excited quite a little ripple of excitement in the crowded court room.

J. Boernert, clerk at the Hotel LeGrand, Wells and Kinzie streets, Chicago, is here to testify for the defense. He will testify that Rogers was a guest at the hotel April 2 and 3 and did not check out from the hotel until 5:45 of the evening of April 3. He has the hotel register of that date with him.

Favor Changes in Game Law.

The Council Bluffs Fish and Game Protective association at its meeting last night voted in favor of recommending numerous changes in the present game laws of this state and will endeavor to have the desired changes brought before the legislature at this session if possible. The club favored the imposition of a $1 license or tax on all guns used for hunting purposes and that this tax, together with the present tax or license of $20 paid by nonresident hunters, instead of being paid to the county auditor be paid to the state treasurer and used in enforcing the state game laws. It also favored the changing of the law so that the $10 license for nonresident hunters should be good for the entire state instead of in a single county issuing such license.

The club also will recommend that deputy fish and game wardens be paid a salary of not to exceed $1 a month. Another recommendation decided on is that the closed season of game birds be extended from November 1 to December 30 and that duck, jack snipe and coots be included in the list of protected birds. Some changes in the law governing sealing in private lakes will also be made.

LEGISLATORS BACK AT WORK

Proposal to Try the Gothenberg System of Regulating Liquor Sales.

PARDONS COMMITTEE HEARS KUHN CASE

Republican State Committee Meets to Fix Time and Place for Holding the Next State Convention.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

DES MOINES, Feb. 16.—(Special.)—The legislature commenced work again this afternoon with nearly all members present, the visiting committee of the appropriations committee having returned from the various state institutions and members generally expressing themselves as well pleased with the investigations made as to the necessity for additional appropriations. On convening of the legislature the governor sent to the houses the following message:

It is with great sorrow that I officially announce to you the death of Senator Marcus A. Hanna of Ohio, which occurred at Washington yesterday afternoon. Senator Hanna was one of America's most distinguished statesmen, a statesman of high order and a citizen of rare worth. His death brings universal mourning and grief to the people of his native Ohio. The house spent much of its time debating a concurrent resolution to provide the speaker of the house and the president of the senate with a chair each. The discussion arose over an amendment to strike out the preceding officer of the senate and to provide for a chair for the speaker of the house. The resolution was passed.

The resolution laid over previously to get out of consideration of the appropriations bills save those relating to educational institutions, the capitol repairs and a few other subjects, was called up by Mr. Geneva and lost.

The senate passed the Lewis bill to provide that the bridge fund tax levy may be increased from 3 to 4 mills in counties where there is a certain debt on the bridge fund. The child labor bill was taken up and discussed in the senate and amendments were not finally passed.

An important bill was introduced in the senate by Mr. Courtwright providing for adoption of the Gothenberg system of liquor sales in large cities of Iowa, under which system a corporation might be formed to have the exclusive right to the sale of liquors and to establish a limited number of drinking places. The bill provides complete regulations of these places, including prices and quantity of the drinks and disposition of profits, etc. It does not change the present law, but adds to it and provides that this system may be used where the license to sell has already been voted.

Senator Hughes introduced a resolution to call a constitutional convention for Iowa for revision of the state constitution. Among bills introduced in the house was one by McNeie providing for seizure of gambling devices under certain circumstances. Both houses adjourned to 10 a. m. Wednesday.

Pardon Hearings Continued. The pardons committees of the legislature met this afternoon and took up the case of Sarah Kuhn of Keokuk county, serving time for the murder of her husband, a crippled shoemaker of Delta. The application for pardon was found to be very strongly backed by leading citizens of the community in which the trial was had. It was also fortified by a dissenting opinion of one of the judges of the supreme court in which he declared the evidence insufficient to convict the defendant of the crime and severely scored the majority of the court for having permitted the judgment of a life sentence to stand.

Supreme Court Divided.

The Iowa supreme court found itself divided again on one of those nice distinctions of law relating to what constitutes evidence of guilt. In the case of Pecker and Miller, three roving characters, convicted of robbery in Union county, the court had instructed the jury that if it found that "the defendants at once after the alleged offense fled to Missouri and endeavored to avoid arrest and prosecution by flight, such fact would be presumptive evidence of guilt." The court, in an exhaustive opinion by Justice McClain, holds that this was erroneous instruction, as fully authorizing a finding of guilty on evidence of such flight practically alone. The court holds that flight after a crime has been committed may be considered as evidence tending to show guilt. But Chief Justice Deemer, with Justice Ladd agreeing, filed a sly dissenting opinion, holding just to the contrary. "After all," says the dissenting opinion, "the whole matter is left to the jury. If a jury is not justified in considering unexplainable flight under the circumstances pointed out in the instruction as evidence of guilt, then such evidence is inadmissible for any purpose. This is all the instruction warrants it in doing; and if it does not announce the law, then I have read the books to no purpose." The case is reversed by the decision of the majority, but all agree that there is no doubt of the guilt of the defendants, there being abundant other evidence.

Court Decisions.

The following are the decisions of the court announced today: A. R. Schrimplin against Farmers Life Association, appellant; Polk county, Judge Bishop; modified and affirmed, by Justice Deemer. H. E. Kuehny, appellant, against John H. Woodbury county, Judge Oliver; affirmed, by Deemer. Isabella Frasier, appellant, against John M. Hill, Cherokee county, Judge Hutchinson; affirmed, by Deemer. W. J. Kirkhart, appellant, against J. E. Roberts, Van Buren county, Judge Roberts; affirmed, by Deemer. D. M. Smith, appellant, against W. T. Brown, Louisa county, Judge Smythe; affirmed, by Deemer. State against Claude J. Poe, Harry Miller and Robert Decker, all approved, county, Judge Turner; reversed, by McClain, dissent by Deemer and Ladd.

Political Affairs Stagnant.

The republican state committee meets here tomorrow to fix the time and place for the republican state convention. It will be held in Des Moines, but there is much difference of opinion as to the date, the stand-patters desiring a late date, while the Cummins people are for an early one. Only one name has been mentioned for temporary chairman, that of John N. Irwin, a merchant of Keokuk; but a number of conventions have already been called in counties and there is some political activity. In Winnebago county the convention is to be held next Saturday and the caucus in the county seat are Thursday evening. The line is already sharply drawn there as between State Treasurer Gilbertson on the one side, with Albert O. Olson as a candidate for delegate to the national convention, and on the other side S. A. Plummer, a wealthy banker, seeking the delegation to the congressional convention as a candidate for congress. The fight has become intensely interesting already. A number of other conventions and primaries have already been called.

Marble Men Meet.

For the purpose of discussing a schedule of prices and the possibility of getting a reduction of freight rates the Iowa Granite and Marble Workers' association will hold a convention at the Kirkwood hotel tomorrow. Invitations to meet here have been sent to all the principal marble workers in the state by Mr. Fields of Craton, and it is expected that fully fifty will be here for the gathering. This morning when seen the leading merchants in tombstones in Des Moines dealt any solicitation with the association. They said it was a movement to fix prices and light the railroads on freight rates. The object is said to be to cut down the keen competition which exists in the granite works.

FOUND BELOW THE DEAD LINE

Larry Summerfield, the Confidence Operator, Arrested Just in Time.

ABOUT TO CLOSE DEAL TO SELL STOCK

Detective Hunts Across Criminal in the Financial District of New York

Posting Under the Name of Morton.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Found below the famous "dead line" drawn years ago by Police Inspector Byrnes around the New York financial district, Larry Summerfield, an alleged confidence operator, and now under heavy bail pending trial on a charge of grand larceny, was arrested in Wall street today, just in time, it is claimed, to prevent the consummation of an attempt to swindle William D. Luther, an insurance agent of Dallas, Tex., by the sale of fraudulent mining stock. Summerfield and Luther were leaving a broker's office when a police detective who had seen them enter, accosted Summerfield by name, and asked him what he was doing below the "dead line."

"You must be mistaken," said Luther. "This gentleman's name is not Summerfield, it's Morton."

"I guess not," retorted the detective. "Mr. Summerfield and I are well acquainted."

He then asked Luther what dealings he had had with Summerfield. Luther told of answering a newspaper advertisement telling of how an investment of $4,000 could be doubled in a very short time, and of receiving a reply signed "H. B. Morton." Luther was in Boston at the time and hurried to meet "Morton" at a hotel there.

Morton, explained Luther, said he had stock in a "Crescent Creek" mining company rated at $100,000 to sell at a bargain and referred me to A. N. Hayden, treasurer of the Consolidated exchange, Philadelphia, by whom I was informed the stock was first class.

By arrangement Luther came to New York today to meet "Morton" in Wall street, and was about to go with him to close the deal when "Morton" was arrested. A charge of attempt to swindle was made on which Summerfield was arraigned, and held for examination tomorrow.

With him was also arraigned John Shears of Newark, who was arrested at the same time on a similar charge.
