In a speech characterized by intense vigor Mr. Flood (Va.) asserted that the credit for the establishment of the rural free delivery service belongs to the democrats. The credit, he said, had been claimed by Mr. Heath, former first assistant postmaster general. The admiral says:

Cavite. The admiral says:

During the run from Yokohama to Honolulu the seas were the worst I have ever experienced and continued practically throughout the entire run. Weather conditions from Honolulu to Cavite were better and, on the whole, the trip was an easy and comfortable one. During this run of practically 8,500 miles to Cavite no repairs or overhauling was done on the engines of any of the vessels by any outside force, and such as was done by the force on board each vessel was such as could be taken in hand during the short stay at Honolulu while not taking on coal.

The speed maintained by the battleship squadron from Yokohama to Honolulu was twelve and a half knots. The battleship squadron arrived in Cavite, after this run it, as good condition as when it started out from Yokohama and was ready for any service that it might be called on to perform.
