Saturday was a bury day for the candidates and politicians, and both republican and democratic workers were much in evidence on the streets. The candidates on both tickets were out hustling and putting the finishing touches to their campaigns, while on every street corner were to be seen groups of politicians and others who were not politicians, discussing the probabilities of Monday's election.

Yesterday was the last day for registering for Monday's election and the party workers were busy seeing to it that everyone who was not registered got his name on ; the lists. As a result of this activity the registration was unusually heavy and at the close of the registration at 9 o'clock G. Edwards, contralto; Mr. W. H. Wilbur, last night. It is estimated that about 700 names must have been added to the lists, which, with the registration of the first

In Counties Which Have Held Conventions Up to Present Time.

DES MOINES, March 26 .- (Special.)-The appropriations committees of the senate and house have been at work hard on the appropriations for the state institutions and will soon complete the budget. The plan is to keep the appropriations for extraordinary purposes down to $1.800,000 for the blennial period, though they may reach $1,000,00 a year, despite the efforts of the economists. By keeping the apstate will not have to levy more than 3 mills on the dollar for state taxes and this will be about the average for many years. The heaviest draft will be for the institutions under the Board of Control, which will require upwards of $525,000. The matter of appropriations for the educational institutions is still much muddled, a few days when the omnibus bills will be presented and promptly passed.

For One Board.

The committee on visitation of the State normal school at Cedar Falls today filed with the legislature a supplemental report on the subject of a Board of Regents for the state educational institutions. The committee, in making its first report, did not consider this subject, but now goes on record as joining with the other committees in favor of the one-board idea.

George Hasbach, charged with the theft of a revolver from the store of Peterson & Schoening, and found to have on him a check bearing the forged signature of Dr. Macras, was bound over to the grand jury yesterday. His bond was placed at two and in default he was committed to the county jail. Investigation by the po-lice has disclosed the fact that Hasbach, or Harbach, which he says is his right name, is an imposter, who, while claiming to be the son of a well known physician of Des Moines, makes a practice of apply-ing to members of the medical profession for assistance. He solicited financial as-sistance from several physicians in this city. Inquiry made by the police showed that Hasbach's claims are false.
