HE TOUCHES UPON PAST DIFFERENCES

Deceased Senator, in Opinion of the Spenker, Was a Man of Much Force, but Made Some Mistakes.

WASHINGTON, April 7.- The senate to day passed a bill providing allotments for Indians on the White Earth reservation in

In accordance with previous agreement, the senate devoted practically its entire time today to eulogies upon the character of the late Senator Hanna. Mr. Foraker presented the usual resolution of sorrow, and asked for their consideration. Mr. Foraker was the first speaker. The galleries were crowded by friends and admirers of the late senator, and the speakers were given close attention. Mr. Foraker's address was a candid review of the public career and a frank analysis of the character of his late col-

Stating that he had first become ac quainted with Mr. Hanna at the national convention in 1884, where both were dele gates-at-large, Mr. Foraker said they had co-operated in support of Mr. Sherman for the presidency. "As a result of that experience," he said, "we became warm frien's, both politically and personally."

This friendship, said the senator, had been interrupted prior to the convention of 1888, when their relations were entirely interrupted for the next three years 'when," he went on, "in a modified and less cordial way they were resumed, and thereafter continued until his death. These relations were less cordial than previously because, although we at times heartily cooperated, and in a personal and social way were entirely friendly, yet in political matters we were generally opposed to each other in the factional contests and controversies among the republicans of our state."

Relations with McKinley.

He said that Mr. Hanna's relation to President McKinley had naturally rendered him "dominant in Ohio politics." These matters of the past, said the senator, were brought up only for the purpose of illustrating the points of view from which he had studied the man. He said: "In the grave with him lie buried all differences, all hostilities, all prejudices and all unkindness of feeling of every sort that ever at any time may have been entertained. would not discuss anything of such a nature on this occasion if I could, and could not do so with propriety, if I would, Here and now all criticism should be hushed, except only that which may be on inseperable part of his actual life character and public services."

He did not believe that if living, Mr Hanna would want other than a frank discussion of his qualities. Continuing, Mr. Foraker said:

To those who knew him only as I knew him for the first four years of our acquaintance, he was an unusually lovable man. He was bright, cheery, generous, kind, strong and ever ready to practice self-denial, especially when it involved the preferment of a friend.

These qualities were preferment of a friend.

These qualities were so pronounced and so manifest that none others could well be seen by those who looked through only the partial eyes of friendship.

By these traits and habits he naturally made such ardent friends of all with whom he met that it was easy for them to think and believe that if he had difference with any one or met with opposition with any one, it must have been without fault on his part.

is part.
But while he thus appeared to his friends.
But while he thus appeared to his friends. and had not occasion to know him except in agreeable relations, he appeared to have some additional and less agreeable charac-teristics to those who were so unfortunate to be in opposition to him concerning any matter he deemed important.

Man of Strong Convictions.

Man of Strong Convictions.

To all such he was the very impersonation of antagonism itself. He had such strong convictions that he always felt impelled in such cases to contend with all his energy and power for the views he entertained and the cause he espoused. In all such contests he invariably battled fiercely and unrelentingly to the end, spurning all compromises and stopping at nothing henorable short of unqualified success. He was so constituted by nature that he tould not easily do otherwise.

As a result he seldom resorted to diplomacy or to any kind of effort to placate or molify opposition, but relied on the logic of hard knocks.

Like Napoleon he believed that the way to win victory was to have the heaviest artiflery and pienty of it and to make vigoroms use of it.

While this policy made many enemies it

While this policy made many enemies it also made friends, and this friendship was reciprocated to the extent, Mr. Foraker said, that Mr. Hanna would often assist his friends in their battles "regardless of their

Only a man of uncommon strength of character and one possessing the confidence of his fellow countrymen to an unusual degree, he added, "could have done what he so habitually did in this respect without serious injury to his reputation, but with him it came to be regarded as a virtue." Mr. Foraker spoke eloquently of Mr. Hanna's intellectual qualities, of his unerring judgment of men, his executive qualfties, his strong common sense, his business training, etc., but said that he was deficient in scholarship and oratorical gifts. Speaking of Mr. Hanna's career in the senate, Mr. Foraker said:

His services in the senate covered a period of almost seven years.

During all this time he was prominent, influential and helpful in determining policies and shaping legislation of national and international importance and consequence, but he left behind him no statute or other measure of which he was distinctively the author.

Referring to Mr. Hanna's part in the McKinley campaign, Mr. Foraker anid: This was his great opportunity, and he

There was no ignoble trait or passion that was not ascribed to him and portrayed of him in the political cartoons and writings of that day. A less strong man would have despaired and been destroyed by it, but he never showed the slightest concern on such account.

Conscious of his power and the ultimate vindication of his purpose, he disregarded them all and went steadily forward upon the lines of duty as he saw it.

He grew not alone with the years, but even with the days. Seen the whole country came to understand that he was one of the really great men of his day and generation. Then the pendulum of public opinion swung quickly in the opposite direction. Misconceptions falled and mispersentations ceased, praise succeeded to criticism and favor followed, until he enjoyed at the hands of the American people a most rare and exceptional esteem and admiration.

Cartoon Hurt Hanna.

In telling of Mr. Hanna during the sec ond campaign, when he formed the subject for cartoons in many newspapers, Mr. Scott related the following incident: shall never forget one morning when he handed me a New York paper containing a cartoon of himself pictured as a huge monster, clad in a suit covered over with dollar marks, smoking an immense cigar and trampling under foot women and children until their eyes protruded from the sockets in Salt River valley, in Arizona, 300,000 and their skeleton forms writhed in agony. After I looked at it a moment he said to

That hurts, when I have tried all my life to put myself in the other fellow's place; when I have tried to help those in need and to lighten the burdens of those less fortunate than myself, to be pictured as I am here, to be held up to the gaze of the world as a murderer of women and children. I tell you, it hurts.

"And looking up into the frank, manly face I saw the tears coursing down his cheeks, and he turned and sliently walked nway.

Mr. Hanna's industrial theories formed the especial theme of Mr. Denew's address and he found in Major McKinley's selection for the presidency a part of the development of those theories. The public will know little of the great pressure brought to bear on him to accept this crown, nor did he, like Caesar, refuse each time with less and less insistence. He was firm to the last, because he felt he was following the path in which his duty lay. He had given his word he would not be a candidate and he kept his faith. Concluding, Mr. Dick said:

No man who made so brief a passage across the theater of our national life ever left a stronger impress on his day and age in every walk of life in which he took an interest. It is too soon to determine his rightful place in the Valhalla of our national heroes, but it is certain that the impartial blographer will record him a great party leader, a statesman of high rank, a patriot of purest loyalty.

When Mr. Dick finished his address the senate adopted the resolutions presented at the commencement of the ceremony, and at 4:33 p. m. adjourned as a further mark of respect.

POSTPONES IMPEACHMENT CASE

House Takes Up Amendments in Army Appropriations Bill. WASHINGTON, April 7 .- A resolution postponing the consideration of the improceedings against Judge Charles Swayne of the northern district of Florida until December 18, 1994, and authorizing the judiciary committee to take further testimony in the case was agreed to by the house today. The partial conference report on the appropriation bill was agreed to. Four senate amendments were still in disagreement. Mr. Parker (N. J.) endeavored to secure debate on an amendment included in the agreement consolidating certain War department bureaus. Mr. Hull, in charge of the report, declined to yield for the pliment to General Ainsworth, who receives a promotion by the amenement. The four amendments in disagreement were taken up for discussion. The first provision is for the advancement of officers below the rank of brigadier general, who served in the civil war and who are now on the retired list or who may be hereafter retired, and their assignment in certain cases by the secretary of war to duty as militia recruiting officers, as military attaches in military court martials,

Mr. Mahon, rep. (Pa.) offered a substitute eliminating the latter provision of the senate amendment and changing the verbtage of the retirement provision, leaving its purpose the same.

The amendment was agreed to by a rising vote of 121 to 75.

The second senate amendment approprinted $250,000 for a military road from Valdez, Alaska, to the interior of that territory at Eagle City. Mr. 'Cushman, (Wash.) moved that the house concur in this amendment.

Mr. Gaines (Tenn.) declared that charity should begin at home. Tennesse needed roads. Instead, he said, the people of the country were being taxed to build roads in Alaska and were beside being oppressed by trusts. The oppression of the trust, the ice trust, had been relieved by Justice Parker and five other men, he asserted, and suggested that Alaska might send ice to New York.

On a rising vote Mr. Cushman's motion was lost 56 to 78. He demanded a roll call on the proposition, which was ordered. On the yea and nay vote Mr. Cushman's motion was again defeated by 86 to 123. This amendment and those remaining, one for a military trail in Alaska, were sent to

After disposing of a conference report on the army appropriation bill, the house took up the proposition extending the coast wise laws to the Philippines and by a vote of 122 to 100 adopted a special rule to vote on this bill, after a debate of two hours. This debate was exhausted save five min utes when the house adjourned at 5:30 o'clock. An amendment to the bill, postponing the operation of the law until 1906, instead of 1906, will be pro-July 1.

I Act is Repealed They Can Sell Holdings to Settlers Cheaper Than the Cost of a Homestead.

WASHINGTON, April 7 .- Delegate Wilson of Arizona was heard today by the house committee on irrigation of arid lands in opposition to the repeal of the desert land laws. Mr. Wilson pointed out the in terest of the rallroads in the repeal of these laws to be this: That it will be impossible for home seekers to take up lands under the homestead act requiring five years' residence, because the lands cannot be made fertile until water has been secured, taking two or three years; that under the desert land laws settlers can buy these lands from the government make their improvements and get the lands in producing condition before moving on to the lands. By repealing the desert land laws this procedure would be stopped and prospective settlers would be compelled to buy their lands of the railroads. "It is no wonder they can send one of their employes here to work for the repeal of these laws," he declared. He challenged the statements of Mr. Maxwell before the committee that corporations had secured larg tracts of lands in Artsona.

Mr. Maxwell, who was present as the representative of the National Irrigation association, interjected the statement that acres were held by corporations which had secured the land from individual purchas-

Mr. Wilson denied that there was any complaint of this fact in Arizona. Delegate Rodey of New Mexico followed Mr. Wilson also in opposition to the repeal of the desert land laws. He had never heard of frauds in their operation in New Mexico.

KIDNEY and URINARY diseases and all Diseases and Weaknesses of MEN due to evil habits of youth, excesses or the results of neglected or improperly treated private diseases, which cause night losses, day drains and impairs the mind, destroys the muscular and sexual strength, reducing the sufferer to that deplorable state known as Nervo-Sexual Debility.

VARIGOGELE is indicated by enlargement of scrotal veins. Whatever may be the cause, its injurious effects are well known. It usually comes on insidiously, and is discovered by accident, the attention being directed to the scrotum by some morbid sensation there, or a tired, dragged feeling in the groin and back, always worse after prolonged standing, and in most cases there is a dull pain in testicles, with a sense of weight. These pains are made worse by sexual excess. As the disease progresses the parts become reduced in size, soft, flabby and sensitive, and if circulation be not improved by proper treatment, the function of the organs becomes impaired and the parts waste away.

WE LOST MANHOOD WITHOUT

ATTENDANT SYMPTOMS OF THIS DEPLORABLE CONDITION

Weak and relaxed state of body; easily tired; backache, headache, nervousness; despondency, melancholia; milky urine; dribbling; palpitation of heart;
unable to concentrate thoughts; failing memory; bashruiness; sleep disturbed with dreams; tendency to dose during day; specks before eyes; lack of ampition; will power gone; weak organs; shrunken parts; vital losses; poor circulation;
cold, liteless and worn out.

It is sad to contemplate the condition of so many men of our day. The fire of youth has gone out and the foundation of vitality is exhausted. Premature old age! No matter what brought it on, the one thing for you do is to get back the vim, the vigor and the vivacity of youth. Don't lose your grip on life.
There are yet many happy, golden years for you if you will only get help. We can and will not only help you, but cure you. Our treatment will restore to you that which you have lost. It stops unnatural discharges and drains of vigor, and gives perfect power to the sexual organs. It clears up the clouded brain, brightens the intellect and dispels despondency. In short, our treatment for weak men builds up the physical and mental as well as the sexual man, and prepares him anew for the duties and pleasures of both married and single life.
