Report Says No Member of Popular Branch of Congress bid Anything Improper with Postal De-

WASHINGTON, April 12-The report of the special committee of the house appointed to investigate the report from the Postoffice department, printed under the caption "Charges Concerning Members of Congress," was made to the house today by Chairman McCall. The report is signed by all seven members of the committee The minority members, however, append supplemental views the important phase of the report is a finding regarding the connection of members with the business of the Postoffice department. This finding is as follows: after a careful consideration of all cases pecified in the report numbered 1236 (the report of the postoffice committee of "cnarges against members of congress" report of the postofice committee on carges against members of congress; so far as they relais to present members of the house of representatives, which the committee assume to be the limit of their jurisdiction, they have unanimously reached the conclusion that nothing has appeared in connection with said case that would justify the finding that any member of the house of representatives has profited financially in the sightest degree, or that any member was guilty of improper conduct in connection therewith or that any member has done in connection with said cases anything that did not appear to be within the line of his official duty according to long-established custom.

In ving reached this conclusion the committee feels constrained to add that in their opinion it would be well to make as formal as may be, and to restrain within the narrowest possible limits, the action of membersin connection with postofices and the details of other executive matters, and that the severance of members from work of that character would augment the efficiency of the house of representatives.

In conclusion, the committee would desire the attention to the fact that this inquiry has come upon the house suddenly and without any notice to its members. Their currespondence has been brought to the light with that department of the government with which their relations are most intimate. In no instance is it likely that they expected the letters which they eroment with which their relations are most intimate. In no instance is it likely that they expected the letters which they wrote would be published. These letters were written under a great variety of cir-cumstances, in heats, and some doubtless by the private secretary of a member; some of them formal and some of a personal nature.

of them formal and some of a personal nature.

It is to the credit of the membership of the house that correspondence of this character thus collected together should contain so little of an unfavorable character. Undoubtedly there are letters which were carelessly written. The action in some cases was not well considered. The statement found in some lustances in some letters from the executive office, that what was done was done as a favor to the member, might well have been resented. But there is nothing in any of the cases considered that reflects upon the integrity of the membership of the house of representatives.

Twi-Year-Olds Ga har the Game from Omeha in Eighth Inning.

DUSTY MILLER DOES STAR WORK OF TEAM

Three Rits in Four Times Up and One Circus Catch His Contribution to the Day's Amuse-

Companion, he of the mighty southpaw and the wondrous snaky curves, stacked up against Selee's 2-year-olds of the National league yesterday afternoon on the Vinton street grounds, and for seven bully innings held their noses to the grindstone in magnificent fashlon, just the same as be would had they not had the glamour of way-up professionalism wrapped round about them. And then in the eighth inning, with more than a fighting show for a victory, the home team slipped a cog and the stuff was off. Up to the fatal eighth the visitors had found Companion for three runs and eight hits, but he had seven good men behind him and they took care of the field in good shape. Omaha had two runs and only needed one little one to tie the thing up; but it was not to be. Evers started the trouble in the eighth with a single to the right pasture and the next ball pitched Kling landed in the same garden spot and put Evers safe and sound on the third base. Brown had two strikes and when the next one soared wild he hit at it and lit out for first. The ball went by Gonding through no fault of his and Evers brought home his run and with room to spare, while the rest of the bunch moved up a notch all around. Then for fair and the trick was turned, Slaughter Follows Here. Slagle slugged it out to center and moved Kling and Brown up to third and second respectively. Single kept monkeying and was thrown out at second. Casey was out at first and it began to look as if the slaughter might not be so great, after all. But Companion could not get one in the right place for Chance and he waiked. McCarty laid the first one that came his way over in the left field and Kling and Brown both scored. That made three. This seemed to put the dope to Carter and instead of fielding the ball man fashion he threw it in on the ground and while it was coming Chance made a break for the plate. Of course Companion seized the ball and gave it a wild ding to Gonding to catch Chance. The latter hit the plate all right, but the ball went twenty feet over it and the 200 or 400 of the faithful who had braved the cold wind to be there, groaned in agony as, in the melee, Mo-Carty trotted in with the fifth run of the inning. Williams hit to left and Jones went out from short to first, retiring the World by the following score: side. But it was too late and the home team went out in one, two three order, and the game was done.

The prettiest play of the afternoon was a ne-handed catch by Miller of a long fly in left center. Dusty couldn't stretch far enough to get both hands on it, so he just reached up and gathered it in with his little mitt. Miller, by the way, did a few CHICAGO.

ponents? Who can state the principles of the democracy of 1964? Were they correctly set forth at Kansas City?
The democratic leaders are anxiously considering what issues they may get rid of and how best to do it. When their platform is finally written up its chief plank will be denunciation of republican policies and defamation of character. The end will be an overwhelming republican victory in November.

As to Tariff Question.

Alluding to the tariff, which the speaker said the democrats would want to revise, he said: The next time we tackle the tariff we

The next time we tackle the tariff we propose to improve upon that. But so long as the present law works well and produces sufficient revenue and the prosperity of the country lasts, and the welfare of the wage earner is secure, we shall "continue to let well enough alone."

Coming to the question of presidential candidates he said: Democratic statesmen in Washington are Democratic statesmen in Washington are burning the midnight all poring over the columns of yellow journals and the decisions of our court of appeals for a lender, while now and then a good old democrat, who always believes himself of the Jeffersonian type, is singing "Four Years More of Grover," ar signing for the late "peeriess leader." The question with him is not, is he fit? is he capable? Is he honest? Oh, no. The burning question is of a financial character. Will the sinews of war be forthcoming? Can we fool a majority of the people with him?

We have a candidate, strong, earnest, honest and brave. The enemy assails him for the "mistakes he has made." They say he forgot the dignity of his position, the he forgot the dignity of his position, the constitutional limitations of his office, by interfering in the coal strike. Well, he did interfering in the coal strike. Well, he did interfere: he saw the strike prolonged through the weary months; he foresaw the dreary winter with the approaching coal famine. The suffering and anguish of his own people became a real and herrid picture and he could walt no longer. He did not forget that he was president. This position magnified his responsibility, but above all he remembered that he was a man. He heard the voice of humanity, and, undaunted by the risk of failure, he threw his boundless energy into the work and won.

Trusts and Litigation. How marked a contrast to the counsel of the leader of the democracy in our own state. He did not hesitate to pander to the lowest instances of paternalism and socialists and write into the platform of his party the government ownership of mines. The people asked for relief. Hill gave them a barren and buncombe resolution. Roosevelt started the machinery in motion, then brought them comfort and happiness. happiness.

It is said in some quarters that he made a mistake in bringing suits under the Sherman law. His party framed and enacted the laws which he found on the statute book. It was his duty to enforce them. He has done so, fearlessly. The result has called a halt on unlawful enterprise. It has improved business tone. It has brought security to legitimate enterprise.

it has brought security to reprise.

Now that the law is upheld, our opponents clamor for the commencement of a general crusade for the ruin of all corporations good, had and indifferent. The republican party is an enemy to unlawful enterprises only. It will not commence an indiscriminate slaughter against those which promote prosperity and provide wages to the workers by lawful methods. In a word, the law will be impartially enforced.

forced. He found a department charged with fraud in some of its bureaus. He insisted on immediate investigation, it was thorough and complete. Corruption was uncarthed in two bureaus. The grafters were exposed and indictments and trials have followed, and the courts will punish the guilty.

The president, the speaker declared, had fulfilled his pledge to carry out the policies of William McKinley, and the crowning glory of the Roosevelt administration, he said, in conclusion, will be the early beginning of the work of the isthmian canal. The committee on resolutions met immediately after the recem was announced and Chairman Burnett read the draft of the platform.
