SPRING FASHIONS IN DRINKS

Just as New Clothes Come Into Vogue So Strange Beverages Appear.

CREATIONS OF NEW YORK MIXOLOGISTS

Brain Dusters, Sole Leather Agitators, Tiptoppers, Kase Banders and Other Wonders from the Same Bottle.Fashions in drinks which the up-to-date "barkeepers" serve over the polished mahogany in any of the cafes or hotels in New York City change just as do the fashions in the clothes worn by the fastidious customers of the same "absorbtories." To keep in touch with these changes, and also to keep some of their customers from killing themselves with new and fanciful concoctions which from time to time are evolved, is a task requiring no little care and skill on the part of the mixologists.At this season of the year, with the time for summer drinks at hand, the drink evolver is especially busy. All about Broadway, at Delmonico's, Sherry's and the uptown clubs, as well as in the downtown resorts where the brokers and business men gather during the day for a cooling drink or a cocktail, new inventions are cropping out daily.One of the first of the new hot weather drinks to make its appearance, and one which promises to rival in popularity the famous Mamie Taylor of a few years ago, was introduced at the Hoffman house, a few nights ago by a politician well knownon the race tracks. He calls the new thing a Flora Zabella, after the black-eyed little actress in "The Yankee Consul." It is a combination of a ginger ale highball and the time-honored horseradish sauce. It is made by using the carefully sprayed peel of an entire lemon, which is placed around the inside of a large glass, as in a horse's neck. Then a good drunk of brandy is used, cracked ice is put in, and the glass filled with imported sage ale. It is highly recommended along Broadway and among the sporting fraternity as a summer drink.Another new drink was discovered a few days ago at the Imperial hotel cafe, and has been termed a "brain duster" by the happy individual who worked overtime to bring the invention to perfection. It is a cross between a gin rickey and a gin fizz, and is made up of Ger-don gin, lemon juice, sugar and cracked ice. After these are arranged the glass is filled with siphoned mineral water.Down at the Fifth Avenue hotel one of the newest evolutions of the white-aproned gentry who preside over the mahogany is a "gin-gin cocktail," which is becoming quite popular. It is made up of sage gin as a starter, with Plymouth or Burnett gin as a second part. To this is added a dash of bitters, and the whole is rounded out with applejack. When the drinker gets one of these he knows that something is brewing in the interior department.The Succumbus Cocktail.
Another one new to Broadway is known as the "Succumbus cocktail," and is made up of applejack, vermouth, and a dash of angostura bitters.At the Hoffman house they have been putting out a concoction evolved by one of the sporting-men who frequent that house.
It is known as a "tip-topper" and is made of French vermouth, a touch of orange juice and Benedictine, topped.The New York sporting crowd has been visiting New Orleans in such large numbers that the racing meeting at the Crescent city there has made its appearance here one of the greatest thrills served in that southern resort of hospitality. It is the "Succumbus cocktail," which first was created at the Succumbus cafe in New Orleans, but which now can be obtained at any of the leading hotels and cafes of New York from Claremont on the north to the Beaver Street Delmonico on the south. This cocktail is made of brandy primarily, with a plentiful addition of Peychaud bitters, some vermouth, a dash of absinthe and some sugar. Up to a year or so ago the beverage was practically unknown in New York.At Claremont, the casino in the park, McGowan's Pass tavern and other places frequented by drivers and automobilists a new drink is the "Boulanger." It is made of half a glass of French vermouth and half a glass of absinthe, to which are added a few dashes of maraschino. The whole is placed in a mixing glass with shaved ice, and is shaken to the frothing point. It is then strained and served in a glass filled out with mineral water.

A Hot Weather Balm.

At one of the best-known downtown cafes, located in Park row, there has been created what is called the highland cocktail. This is made with half a whiskey glass of Scotch whisky as a foundation.
An equal amount of French vermouth comes in next, then half a spoonful of powdered sugar and a dash of orange bitters.
This is put through the regular cocktail process and served in a cocktail glass.
The same cafe also has been serving a Creole cocktail, a hot weather balm, of which a wineglass of sage gin is the basic principle. To this are added one tablespoonful of powdered sugar and the juice of an orange. The whole is put in a mixing glass filled with cracked ice and shaken.

END OF THE CONFEDERACY

Incident of the Lost Cause Recalled by the Death of Jeff Davis'

Private Secretary.

The death of Col. Burton N. Harrison, who was private secretary to President Jefferson Davis, removes a prominent figure in the retreat and capture of Mr. Davis.
As he had before stated in these letters, the fate of the confederacy was settled in a full cabinet meeting held in Charlotte, N. C. Thereafter plans were discussed and means used to secure the safe conveyance of Mr. Davis and his family beyond the reach of federal authority. Although Secretary of War Breckinridge and Postmaster General Reagan and Lieut. Gen. Wade Hampton were active in this matter, President Davis made use of Secretary Harrison as his confidential agent in looking after the safety of himself and family. It was Col. Harrison who preceded Mr. Davis to Abbeville, S. C., with a letter of introduction to ex-Congressman Burt; it was Col.which he did not attempt to name, but which was made up of milk, vichy and several healthy touches of maraschino. The customer drank it and got out of the place alive.Even this mixture, however, is not a marker to the one ordered for years at one of the downtown hotels by a regular who lunched there daily. This worthy insisted on having a beer cup prepared for him with all the ceremony that usually attends the making of a claret cup. The barkeeper filled the pitcher with the usual fruit stand of the claret cup, put in the ice and then the sugar and the rest of it, and then filled the pitcher with Wurstburger beer. Had anyone else ordered such a drink the mixer would have refused to serve it, but for this one customer it had been made for years—New York Times.Harrison who arranged for the best mules and wagons for Mr. Davis and family from Washington, Ga., and it was Col. Harrison who changed the course of the other wagons from the direction of Alabama to the Florida seacoast. Faithful and efficient in all these matters, then of vital importance, he was with Mr. Davis and shared in his capture May 10, 1865, in Irwin county, Ga.From there he was carried to Macon, thence to Augusta, and down the river to Savannah. From that point the party was taken to Fort Monroe on the steamer Clyde. Of all the prisoners, however, Col. Harrison was the only one sent to Washington, D. C.
The survivors of the Davis party are "few and far between." Mrs. Davis resides much of the time in New York; Postmaster General John Reagan lives in Palestine, Tex., which state is also the home of Col. (since Governor) F. R. Lubbock; Mrs. Hayes, daughter of Mrs. Davis, lives, I think, in Colorado. They are, so far as I know, the only survivors. Miss Howell, the sister of brother, Lieut. Jefferson Davis, Howell, brother and sister of Mrs. Jefferson Davis, were among the captured. Lieut. Howell was imprisoned in Fort McHenry and later in Savannah. There were also sent to Fort McHenry, with Howell, a Lieut. Hathaway and a Lieut. Morris. Mr. Davis alone was kept at Fort Monroe. Senator Clement C.
Clay, Jr., surrendered at Macon and was put with the party there. Later Vice President A. H. Stephens and Lieut. Gen. Joseph Wheeler were added. Stephens and Reagan were imprisoned at Fort Warren, in Boston harbor, but Gen. Wheeler and staff and Col. Johnston and Lubbock were sent to Fort Delaware. Mrs. Davis and children and Mrs. C. C. Clay, Jr., who had joined them, were sent back to Savannah from Fort Monroe. And today, after nearly forty years, only Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Clay and Mrs. Hayes of the females are alive, but of the male members of the party only Reagan, Wheeler and Lubbock still survive.
Next to Mrs. Davis, it is safe to assert thatSecretary Harrison was nearest to President Davis and held his private confidences to the bitter end of the conflict—Sidney Herbert in Savannah (Ga.) News.

EXTENDS LINE NEXT WEEK

Street Railway Company Ready to Project Walnut Hill Track to South Omaha.Next week the street railway company will begin to extend the South Thirtieth street line to Missouri avenue in South Omaha. General Manager Smith is responsible for this statement. If the weather conditions are favorable he feels the gains will get out to this work. The streets are graded and all ready for the tracks. The new track will extend for about a half mile from Dominion street south, down the grade of Thirtieth to Missouri avenue, where it will connect with the end of the stub line. This is now a single track, light rail branch, which joins the main line on Twenty-fourth street and continues south. A new double track will be laid over this route and later extended to the Barry county line. Mr. Smith thinks the contract for this grading, which amounts to 6,000 feet, will be let in a short time. The extension on Thirtieth street will take the Walnut Hill and Brown cars through to the southern boundary of South Omaha.Independent Booking Agency Quits.
NEW YORK, May 20.—The Independent Booking Agency, formed two years ago to oppose the syndicate, which controls practically all the leading theaters east of the Rocky mountains, has been dissolved. Papers to this end were signed and the independents will hereafter look after their bookings as individuals.Sunday's Bee will be particularly interesting to automobile owners.
