The Social Calendar.

MONDAY—Match golf game between the Country and Field club teams at the Field club.

FRIDAY—Musical festival at the First Congregational church.

SATURDAY—Musical festival at the home of Mrs. George Barker.

The week's social affairs have been devoted mostly to the entertaining of out-of-town guests, conspicuous of whom were Mrs. Beall, Mrs. Hogan, Mrs. Miller and Mrs. O. W. Pierce, Jr. Of course the regular meetings of the different clubs were held and are always looked forward to with much pleasure.

The announcement late yesterday afternoon of the death of Mr. Weir B. Coffman in Chicago, one of Omaha's best known young men, came as a shock to society, of which he was a prominent member.

With the counter attractions of a great exposition and palatial homes thrown open to them in brilliant social affairs, the club women gave their first attention to the convention of the General Federation.

Out of their broad experience, Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago, and Mrs. Florence Kelley of the Consumers' league, told a great audience of men, as well as club women, what child labor really means; of the conditions that exist because of it; and of the means of remedying it.

The business sessions were longer and more numerous than ever before and were better attended. Much time was given to amending the bylaws with a view to expediting the business of future conventions.

In the future, polling places with a register of voters will be provided where the votes may be cast outside of the convention hall.

At each poll, these to be appointed as the convention sees fit. This will save the time that has formerly been taken from the business meeting.

The most important amendment provides for a change in membership dues, as follows: "The annual dues of clubs of fewer than twenty-five members shall be $2.00; of clubs of twenty-five and fewer than 100 members, 10 cents per capita."

Clubs of more than 100 members will continue to pay 10 cents per capita. Originally all clubs were assessed the same, but as this small assessment did not pay the actual expense of carrying the smaller clubs and on the other hand occasioned the largest clubs which have only a small membership fee a hardship it was deemed necessary to make some change.

This part of the amendment failed to carry. While it is admitted that the privilege of membership in the General Federation is worth 10 cents a year to any woman, it is necessary for the larger clubs to pay their dues out of the club treasury, as it is practically impossible to collect the cents from all the women, and with the many other demands that come to the large city organizations, paying out several hundred dollars a year in membership dues is a burden to many.

As a precautionary measure, the convention early appointed a committee on resolutions, to which all resolutions were submitted for approval before being allowed to be presented to the convention for adoption. Among those finally presented by the committee was one from the industrial committee for the continuance of the effort for a better regulation of child labor, another recommending an effort for the establishment of the merit system in state and municipal offices; further work for juvenile courts and the probation system, the extension of household economics in the school system, and last, and one that bears the following:

Resolved, That we recognize in the permanence and sacredness of the marriage relation a principle in its significance.

Resolved, That each federation inform
