

INNERS READY FOR OPENING

Great Bandmaster Here for Dedication of Omaha's New Auditorium.

BIG RUSH TO PREPARE FOR GRAND BALL

Indications Point to Tremendous Success Attending This Event, Which Means So Much to Omaha.

The tailors at their work look out over a mound of arms and legs and bodies as deep and mixed as the Peiking regions see the dead Russians. It is the piles of unfinished dress suits. The dressmaking madams struggle about their parlors in a jungle of cotton and costly silk. The cleaners and refurbishers and all other professionals who have to do with the upholstery of mankind are busy right up to the end of the limit. And all of these things because the Omaha Auditorium opens to-night with a great and splendid ball. And Innes has arrived to do the opening.

The only knock heard so far against the opening of the Auditorium is the knock of the hammer, and it is knocking hard. But the building is practically ready for the opening event. The decorators are at work skillfully draping the rods and rods of national bunting about the massive framework. The canvas floor has been laid in the refreshment room and the check rooms and entrances and all the other accessories are being brought to complete readiness to receive the crowd.

President Nash is to make the formal address and to turn over the building to the people of Omaha. The opening event will begin at 8:30 p. m. when the band of the celebrated Innes will strike up Weber's overture, "Jubal."

Nash Presents the Building.

When President Nash presents the building to the public and some one, not yet selected, will reply on behalf of the citizens. After this the band plays for the second concert number, Krause's Intermezzo, "Amra" and Nelson's "Street Songs." The third number of the preliminary concert will be "Omaha Auditorium," a new march dedicated by the band master to Omaha and played on behalf of the citizens. About 9:30 o'clock or 10 o'clock the dancing will begin. The refreshments will be served between 10 and 11 o'clock. For this check will be given at the northern or left entrance of the hall below the stage as the people descend. These checks will be collected at the bottom. The exit refreshments will be by the southern stairs. The catering will be done by Chief Steward Prior of the Omaha club.

Spectators chairs will be in the balcony and those who do not intend to dance should go there at once on entering. One thousand chairs will be placed on the dancing floor during the ceremonies, but these will be removed early. The band will occupy the center of the stage. The directors of the Auditorium company and its officers, the architect, principal contractors, the editors and other representatives of the press and the speakers also will have seats on the stage.

Innes and His Great Band.

Innes arrived this morning and his band of fifty musicians will come in from Rock Island, Ill., at 5 o'clock this evening. The great bandmaster was accompanied by his wife and her mother. They are quartered at the Her Grand. Innes is here for a stay of three weeks to open the Auditorium and to be the chief feature at what he declares will be "the greatest musical festival ever held in the northwest."

Innes is delighted with the Auditorium, which he pronounces as fine as any in the country; delighted with the preparations for the festival; glad he is to have a hand in the first use of the big building and charmed with Omaha, its people and its beautiful weather. In fact the noted musician regards the occasion as a gala one and is going to make the most of it.

Will Give Concert Dances.

Innes gave out a bit of news that will please many hundreds in Omaha. He proposes to give two "concert dances" every week, beginning probably Monday night. These mean that twice a week in addition to the regular musical program, a dance program of eight numbers will be played by the band, the floor cleared of chairs and as many as care to indulge in the pleasures of the waltz and two-step. This arrangement is an innovation in Omaha. It is original with Innes and was inaugurated by him at Atlantic City several years ago. In his own 4,000-capacity auditorium there, located at the end of a pier running into the ocean. His idea was a great success there and he is going to try it for the second time in this city.

Festival Wednesday Night.

"The musical festival proper," said Innes, "begins Wednesday night and lasts until including Sunday night, and then will come the regular series of concerts every afternoon and evening. For the ball the band will be divided into an orchestra and a band, each playing at opposite ends of the hall and alternating."

"The chorus that has been gathered here consisting of 600 voices is one of the greatest ever trained for an affair of this kind in the country. In the east a chorus of 400 is considered large. It was a stupendous undertaking and both Mr. J. H. Innes and Mr. Ben Stanley are entitled to great praise. They will each conduct some of the numbers at every recital."

"The school children's chorus Saturday afternoon is a unique and wonderful undertaking—think of it, 4,000 voices. Miss Fannie Arnold, supervisor of music in the public schools, has impressed me as an unusually competent woman and great credit to her."

SAYS HE BEAT A. D. JONES HERE

"Uncle Bill" Snowden Declares He Was the First White Settler in Omaha.

The coming celebration of the Nebraska semi-centennial Friday threatens to open up several disputes as to the early history of Nebraska. W. P. Snowden, in a letter to Dr. George L. Miller, comes out in a strong protest against A. D. Jones being the first white settler in Omaha and denies that Mr. Jones was ever postmaster here. It is established, it punctures a well known story of Jones carrying the post-office around in his hat. The following is the letter:

OMAHA, Neb., June 2.—Hon. George L. Miller, Dear Sir—I received your invitation to a dinner at the State university to a misfortune that happened to me that I cannot attend. If it was in the day time I could get there, but it is Friday night and broke my left hip joint and can only get around on crutches a little. I being the first white settler here, there is no need for me to be there. There is a great many about with children and I being the population of this city on the 15th day of July, 1854, A. D. Jones claimed that he was the first white settler here. Doctor, you will be apt to talk there. He never was postmaster, either here or there. I would have liked to be with them, for Doctor, there is no mistake about myself, wife and our three children being the population of Omaha on the 15th of July, 1854. Yours truly, giving him a reasonable opportunity to make application for a writ of habeas corpus. To have denied the prayer of Denison's injunction petition would have been a great wrong. It would have permitted unjustifiable and outrageous invasion of his constitutional rights that nothing short of bloodshed could have prevented. The writ of habeas corpus is a writ of right. It cannot be denied by the courts and ought not to be prevented by the plaintiff proceeding under the pretended execution of a warrant of extradition as was proposed by Mr. Christian. As truly said by an able law writer, the writ of habeas corpus stands today, as it did in the days of King Charles to protect and safeguard the liberty of the citizen. It is as much a palladium of liberty today as it was during the abuses existing in the days of the ancient English sovereigns."

W. P. SNOWDEN.

DENISON CASE IS BEING ARGUED

Connell, Smyth and Smith for Defense and Brome for Prosecution.

The criminal district court room was packed to the doors yesterday with a crowd of men anxious to know the result of the trial of the case of the extradition of Tom Denison to Iowa to be tried on a charge of receiving and concealing $15,000 worth of stolen diamonds.

Smyth & Smith appeared with Mr. Connell and after some preliminary matters had been disposed of by Judge Day the arguments in the case were begun. Sitting with Judge Day upon the bench were Judge Troup and Judge Redick.

Preliminary to the opening of the arguments of H. C. Brome for the Civil Federation, Connell opened the case by his application for a writ of habeas corpus in which he set forth more fully in one section the specific law of the United States with regard to extradition. This was at once allowed by the court. Mr. Brome thereupon filed a motion that the application be quashed and set aside on the ground that the extradition asked for was regular and issued within the rights of the governor of the state of Nebraska and that the facts as set forth in the application for the writ furnished no reason why this court should furnish any inquiry as to the facts in the case. He raised the question whether or not it would be competent for this court to take any evidence in the case and argued that it made no difference if Denison was being taken to Iowa for political reasons as alleged in the petition. He said that inasmuch as an indictment had been found by the state of Iowa against Denison as a fugitive from justice the courts of this state were in duty bound by the federal laws of the country to deliver him to the Iowa authorities, on proper showing, without any further question, and leave the matter of the competency of the evidence against him and whether he was guilty of the crime charged, or any other, to the courts of the indicting state. The jurisdiction of the court, Mr. Brome argued, extended only to ascertain if any showing had been made to the governor which caused him to issue extradition papers and that being virtually conceded by the application for the writ there seemed nothing more to do but surrender the prisoner and deny the application. He held that this matter was regulated by the federal law and that therefore the state laws were inoperative with regard to it.

Brome's argument was closed at noon and a presentation of the other side of the question was begun by Mr. Connell at the coming in of the court at 2 o'clock.

At the afternoon hearing Mr. Brome was asked many questions by the judges bearing the case as to the interpretation he wished it understood he had put upon various of the opinions and laws he had put into the case.

Mr. Connell, leading counsel for Denison, said that in the discussion of the case he would have preferred to have taken up the matter according to the facts and evidence that might be introduced, but was not averse to following along the lines submitted by Mr. Brome. He thereupon quoted many authorities tending to show that the district court of Nebraska has jurisdictional authority over the cases that may arise under the laws of this state.

"I suppose," he said, "that we were here to decide on the law of extradition, but Mr. Brome has made it a question of expatriation."

To this Mr. Connell excepted and then proceeded to quote a long list of authorities setting out the circumstances under which persons accused of crime may be taken from one state to the other under the law.

For four hours Mr. Connell followed his line of argument, quoting authority after authority and citing case after case tending to prove his contention that unless evidence be introduced to show that a person accused is a fugitive from justice he cannot legally be extradited into a foreign state.

Mr. Connell's statement was frequently interrupted from the bench and he finally closed at 5 o'clock. The court then announced a recess until 9:30 o'clock this morning, when Mr. Smyth will sum up the case.
