CHASE WINS CLOSE TENNIS TIE Defeats Doe Schneider in Exciting

Game and Reaches Final.

Vernon Chase yesterday evening defeated Dr. Schneider in the St. Croix club tennis tournament with the score of 6-1, 1-6, 7-5.

On account of the doctor's absence from the city Chase had waited several days for the game, which was one of the semi-finals. Dz. Schneider returned yesterday, and considering that he was still tired from his journey he put up an exceedingly creditable article of tennis. At one time he was actually within two points of winning the match. The score was set-all and 5 to 1 in his favor, and he was 20 to 15 in the seventh game. If he had captured any two of the four next points the match would have been his.

Chase, however, made the best of every opportunity. His lobbing especially in the last set was brilliant and his long drives down the side lines were accurate and extremely brilliant.

Chase will meet Kohn in the finals probably this evening.

DEAD COMING TO SURFACE

List of Steamer Victims Increasing at an Alarming Rate.

DEATH LIST SWELLED TO 780 BODIES

Almost Every Passing Steamer Near Scene of the Wreck Churan Water and Baises New Victims.

NEW YORK, June 20.-The list of those who perished on the General Slocum is growing at an slarming rate. Bodies came to the surface today off the shores of North Brother island singly and in groups of twos and threes, until at dusk ninetyeight additional had been recovered.

Every passing steamer seemed to churn up the water to such a degree that with its wash one or more bodies would be swept on to the beach. Between the hours of 8:00 and 6:00 o'clock in the afternoon forty-five bodies, some of them badly mutilated, were taken ashore by the searching

This brings the total number of bodies recovered up to 730, and yet there are something like 300 persons unaccounted for. General dread caused by the disaster had greatly thinned thee rowds which usually fill to the limit the excursion steamers plying to nearby resorts Many steamers with a capacity of 1,500 to 2,000, left their docks carrying less than half that number. Employes of the dock department stationed along the wharves for many years declare they never before had seen such a sudden falling off in the crowds of pleasure seekers. All along the East river from North Brother island down to what are known as the Sunken Meadows search was made touay for bodies of unfortunates who lost steamer General Slocum last Wednesday. Although more than 630 bodies had been recovered last night, reports from the first few minutes of work today added five more to the total. These were found at widely separated points and the searchers were of the opinion that before the day ended the list of missing would be considerably decreased They believe that the steamers and other craft will so stir up the water as to cause bodies lying along the bed of the river to rise to the surface. Wreckers at work on the wreck of the Slocum today encountered new difficulties. They were at work about the hull of the sunken steamer when they found that instead of the bull resting in mud as they delay the work somewhat. Several more bodies were recovered during the day, some of them in the vicinity of the wreck of the Slocum. There are four divers at work near North Brother island today searching for bodies, One diver reports that at a depth of ninety-five feet he has discovered a large thought that it rested on rocks which were hollow, in which, he says, there are a great many bodies.

Witnesses Are Called. The coroner's jury was quickly secured. President Barnaby of the Knickerbocker ter, he said, an inspection of the Slocum was made by the United States authorities before it was put in commission this year. "It was reported to us that the Slocum was in thorough order and working con-the company's inspection and of that by the United States inspection officers. He presented reports of the expenditures on the Slocum for life preservers in 1902, 1903 and 1904, and explained that the books, which were offered for inspection, would show for which vessel they were intended.

Had No Fire Drill. According to the testimony of John J. Coakley, one of the Slocum's deck hands. at the coroner's inquest, he had never been instructed in a fire drill since he became an employe of the Knickerbocker company at the beginning of last season. Coakley said he first learned that the steamer was on fire when a small boy called his attention to the smoke rolling down from the bow. He was below and could not tell where the boat was at that time. The last point he had noticed before leaving the deck was Blackwell's island. Coakley said he ran up toward the bow of the steamer and found a blaze in the locker where the oil for the lamps was kept. He dumped charcoal on it, hoping to smother the flames, then cut down the hose and called for assistance. The fire was so hot that those who came to help him were driven out of the locker. The hose then No attempt was made to replace the ruined hose, he said, as the passengers were in a panic and made it almost impossible for men to do anything. They could not reach the other standpipe back near the stern of the steamer. When the crew found it impossible to control the fire they turned their attention to the passen-Coakley said he took down many life preservers and distributed them. It was impossible to reach any of the life rafts; because of the panic the crew could not get at them.

The boat which they succeeded in clearing and which was filled with women and children capsized while it was being lowered from the davits. The witness was unable to give any information as to the origin of the fire. The room in which it started was lighted by a common ship lamp when in use, but he was sure the lamp was not lighted when he found the blaze. He remembered that a quantity of salf hay which had been packed around a barrel of beer glasses brought on board that day had been stored in the locker

He also said it was a custom for the men to light matches in the looker when they wanted to find anything there. Several other members of the crew corroborated Coakley's story in most of its details, but none of them knew of a life boat having been lowered,

Edward Flanagan, the mate of the last two seasons on the Slocum who hired the where the fire broke out was used for storing old lines and worn out awnings and brooms. He had one barrel of sperm oil there and and there were some empty barrels that had contained oil. Flanagan denied any knowledge of the falso 'washer' which blocked the fire

"What happened to your memory? "Nothing, but I have been through Planegan said that as soon as he was aware of the fire he netified the captain, calling up the tube "We're all afire for-"What answer did you get?"
"I did not wait for any answer, I to the engineer to give me water." "None up to that time. I then ordered some of the men upstairs to man the pipes. Then when the water pressure came a coupler blew off and the home burst. I then ordered some men upstairs to free the life preservers and lower the life boats. Then we tried to reach the other standpipe but could not pass the flames.

"Were any life rafts thrown over after fire broke out?" was asked.

"I don't know," was the answer. Flanagan said he never counted the life preservers aboard, but he was confident plenty were aboard and within easy reach of passengers. In his opinion the life preservers were in first-class condition.

Made Careful Inspection. Gilbert Flanagan said two or three in spectors made inspections of the Slocum last May. They worked separately and were on board nearly all day.

"Did the inspectors take any of the life preservers from the rack?" asked Juror Congressman Goulden. "I did not see them. I only knew they inspected the life preservers because they pointed out twenty or more they con-demned. They were in different parts of the ship." The inquest was adjourned until to
