JOHN L. WEBSTER SATISFIED

Nebraska's Ex-Candidate for Vice President Takes Result Philosophically.

CHANCE OF FIGHT LOST WITH HITT OUT

Says Had Illinois Congressman Staid in Race Nebraska Would Have Had Opportunity to Make a Showing.

"You may say I am satisfied with the result of the national convention," said John L. Webster, Nebraska's candidate for the vice presidency, who returned from Chicago yesterday. "I regarded my own candidacy in a philosophical mood, and therefore am not disappointed—at least not sufficiently disappointed to make me feel badly.

"The convention was too well directed and too perfectly arranged to permit much enthusiasm or interest. Doubtless it would have been better had the western delegates received a trifle more consideration, but the feeling of animosity in this regard may be looked upon as superficial so far as the campaign is concerned.

"A combination of New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Massachusetts and Ohio effected the nomination of Fairbanks. Illinois was induced to withdraw Hitt and this act successfully blocked a fight for the place. Then again, the United States senators present pulled together like one man. Their influence was a great force and, of course, it was exerted in favor of Fairbanks. It was this power that captured South Dakota, Wyoming and other states that would otherwise have been for me had the opportunity been presented.

"The withdrawal of Illinois from the fight for Hitt, however, crippled my chances for the nomination, as well as those of every other candidate except Fairbanks. Had Illinois remained firm a fighting chance would have been afforded to all vice presidential candidates.

"The Nebraska delegation did all it could for me and I am very grateful. Congressman Burdett was perhaps the most aggressive and accomplished a great deal; all of the delegation, however, showing their loyalty and good will.

Relatives of Fairbanks.
Since the nomination of Senator Fairbanks for the vice presidency it has come to light that the distinguished Indianan is not the distant relative in Omaha. They are Myron L. Learned, the attorney, and Leon K. Greenleaf, of the city electric office. The Fairbanks family is one of the oldest in the country, has a firmly established family association and has members scattered all over this and many other countries.

Senator Fairbanks of Indiana is not known personally to a great many Omahans, but among those in the city who have met him is John G. Burgner, Samuel Rathbone, superintendent of the rural delivery, is a friend. Speaking of Senator Fairbanks, Mr. Burgner said:

"I have never had any close intimacy with Senator Fairbanks. Like a great many other smart, as well as ordinary men, he is a native of Ohio, being born and raised on a farm in Union county, near Marysville. I first met him when on a visit to Marysville and a few times since then.

"Senator Fairbanks received his education at the Ohio Wesleyan university, located at Delaware. After preparing himself for a legal career he quickly seized an opening offered, through an uncle, then at the head of one of the railroads entering Indianapolis. The next smart thing he did was to marry a very bright girl, the daughter of P. B. Cole of Marysville.

Soon Leading Lawyer.
"Fairbanks soon became one of the leading lawyers of his adopted state, ranking along with Harrison and Gresham, though a younger man. Having keen observation, with good judgment in business affairs, he soon acquired plenty of money. He did not pose as a candidate for public honors until there came a call for him to go to the United States senate, and then he went right in.

"He is a strong man, and if the party continues in control, as it surely will, Fairbanks will stand a better chance to succeed President Roosevelt in the White House than any other man now in the public eye. This may be looked for, because Fairbanks' life has been one of great success all along the line.

"When I first saw Senator Fairbanks he seemed as slim as a rail and as tall as a tree. He has rounded out since then and I suppose stands about six feet four inches high. He is a fine appearing man and a most impressive speaker. I look for him to take an active part in the campaign and doubtless he will speak in Omaha."

PRICE OF MEAT ADVANCES

Raise Felt by Consumers and Packers and Retailers Blame Each Other.

BUTCHERS SAY THEY HAD TO INCREASE

Wholesalers Deny that Any but Fancy Cuts Were Put Up and They Because Cattle Cost More.

The packers and retail butchers blame each other for a jump in the price of beef that has been made by local meat dealers during the last week. The advance is from 3 to 25 cents a pound on all kinds of beef cuts. Pork also has gone up from 1 to 14 cents a pound. In extension the meat men declare the packers are charging prices that make the increase imperative, while the packers admit the charges only in part.

At One of the Big Meat Markets

downtown this was the story told: "We have been forced to raise prices for beef and pork because we have to in order to get a profit. About a month ago the packers started to advance the prices on beef and pork. We thought it might be only temporary and held off from boosting the retail cost, but no reduction has been made and, on the contrary, further increases were made. It has come to a point where we have to charge more to the consumer to protect ourselves. Roundsteak that used to be bought by the consumer at 10 cents a pound a week ago now is 13 1/2 cents; sirloin has climbed from 12 1/2 cents to 15 cents; porterhouse about the same increase and rib and other roasts about the same per cent."

Statement of Packers.

At Cudahy's a statement to this effect was made: "It is true that advances have been made in the price of beef, but it is only the very best grades that are much affected. We are now paying $1 to $1.50 more per hundred for this class of stuff than we did a short time ago. Within the last few days there has been some decline in the cheaper grades. There is no justification in prices for the advance made by the meat dealers except for the fancy cuts. Our increases were made because live stock is hard to get and there is a marked scarcity of corned cattle at this particular time."

The retailers assert the extra margins demand in Omaha have not been exacted in other western cities, but this the packers deny, saying that the charges are the same generally and regulated according to the markets.

SEAVEY WILL GO ON STAND

Will Testify in Denison Case, Wherein Pinkerton and Pollock Submit Depositions.

When the hearing of the Denison case is resumed Monday morning the attorneys for the Civic Federation will introduce W. S. Seavey, former chief of police of Omaha, as a witness, and also bring in depositions from W. A. Pinkerton and W. G. Pollock, the man who was robbed of the diamonds. The purpose of this testimony is to impeach the evidence given by Omaha police officers.

H. C. Brume is taking the deposition of Mr. Pinkerton in Chicago today and the deposition of Mr. Pollock was taken Thursday in New York City by J. H. McIntosh, formerly of this city.

Mr. Seavey is expected to testify that the Omaha police did not begin to shadow Denison until after they had been advised to do so by the Pinkerton agency and Mr. Pinkerton. It is said, will depose that his letter to Captain Weeber, his Omaha representative, ordering the shadowing of Denison, was not written and mailed from Chicago until March 13, which is sometime after the date upon which the Omaha police officers have testified that they began to keep their eyes on Denison.

The deposition of Mr. Pollock, it is said by Lester Thomas, will show that Denison visited Pollock at his room in the Millard hotel several times soon after the date of the robbery. The local police officers have testified that Denison did not go to the Millard hotel while under their surveillance.
