LOOMIS IS STILL MISSING

American Has Not Been Found by Men Who Are Looking for Him.

PARIS, June 25.—The whereabouts of Kent J. Loomis, brother of the American assistant secretary of state, Francis B. Loomis, who disappeared shortly before the arrival of the North German Lloyd steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II at Plymouth June 20, remains in the same state of doubt as yesterday.

The officials who are conducting the search for the missing man say there is no truth in the report published by a London newspaper to the effect that Loomis turned up here yesterday. The announcement presumably resulted from confusing the names of Loomis and W. H. Ellis, the latter sailing from Marseilles this afternoon for Abyssinia.

LONDON, June 25.—The mystery which surrounds the disappearance of Kent J. Loomis is no nearer solution. Not a solitary clue as to his whereabouts has resulted from nearly a week's widespread investigation. Consul General Evans and the assistant consuls have made and are still making all possible inquiries, but without the faintest trace of the missing man.

The statement of Gustav Flamm of San Francisco, a passenger on the Kaiser Wilhelm II, that he saw Loomis at Plymouth is so far uncorroborated. The American consul at that port says that 150 landed, all of whom gave their names. These tally with the passenger list and Loomis' name is not among them. One American who left for London during the evening of June 21, the day after the Kaiser Wilhelm II touched at Plymouth, and who it was thought might have been Loomis, proved to be many years older than the assistant secretary of state's brother.

At the request of Consul General Evans the hospitals of Plymouth are now being searched. Scotland Yard also has the matter in hand and the English papers, especially the local papers at Plymouth, continue to give prominence to the American's disappearance, so if Loomis is in England and in possession of his faculties he could scarcely fail to know he is being looked for.

The authorities here are unable to form a conjectural explanation of Loomis' disappearance. The theory that he fell overboard finds no supporters, as it is pointed out that it would be almost impossible for a small man to fall over the high deck rails, especially when the sea is particularly calm, as it was in this case. The bright moonlight also practically precluded such an event occurring without attracting notice from the hundreds of passengers and the many officers who thronged the liner's decks when nearing Plymouth. The suggestion that Mr. Loomis might have unintentionally disembarked at Plymouth is now regarded as quite probable. From one of Mr. Loomis' fellow passengers a representative of the Associated Press learned that W. H. Ellis and Loomis were constantly together and were known as intimate friends. Mr. Loomis did not make any acquaintances. Several well known Americans who came to London by the boat train say that they did not even know Loomis was on board.

The utter failure of all efforts here and on the continent to discover any trace of the missing man excites much interest and no little apprehension among the large class of the public taking the transatlantic voyages.

The circumstances connecting Loomis with the Abyssinian treaty creates especial interest here as the sphere of influence of that country is one of the current matters especially engaging the attention of European diplomats and as announced in these dispatches, is one of the subjects on which exchanges of confidential communications are occurring between Great Britain and Russia.

NEW YORK, June 25.—(Special.)—Five months ago George Duff, a Union Pacific fireman at Omaha, kidnapped his 2-year-old daughter from her mother while they were walking in one of Cheyenne's residential streets and fled with the child to Omaha. The kidnapping created a sensation here at the time, Duff being followed out across the prairie by a number of the friends of Mrs. Duff. As he had a fast team however, he was not overtaken and boarded a train for Omaha at Pine Bluffs. Yesterday Mrs. Duff returned from Omaha with the child, having obtained it from Duff, who evidently had grown tired of the little one. Duff has brought suit in the Omaha courts for divorce.

 CHEYENNE, Wyo., June 25.—(Special.)—William Lee, a cook at Sidney, Neb., became infatuated with 15-year-old Annie Buckley, daughter of a Sidney railroad man, and induced the maiden to elope to Cheyenne with him. It was the intention of the couple to get married here, but the father of the girl prevented the issuance of a license and instructed Sheriff Smalley to arrest the couple. Lee and Miss Buckley were returned to Sidney and Lee will be prosecuted.

GETS THREATENING LETTERS
 Man Believed to Have Been Object of Switla's Wrath Is Being Annoyed.
 Fred Riley, who was a witness to the shooting of Officer William Haltermann by Frank Switla, Twenty-ninth and Cassel streets last Tuesday night and who is alleged to be the party whom Switla was really gunning for, is being pestered with anonymous letters which in a measure disturb his peace of mind. He received a letter Saturday through the postoffice which reads as follows:
 OMAHA, Neb., June 25, 1904.—To Tilley and Grim: Will you the two of you two days with which to get out of this settlement. If you will be dealt with harshly you can't live here any longer. Friends of the men with whom you have had this trouble. You had better move and do it quick.
 Fred Riley says he is not the man with whom Switla had his trouble and he is at a loss to know why he should be singled out as the object of the special wrath of Switla and his friends. Riley says further: "I have nothing to leave this town for and I do not intend to be driven out by any threats. But I think I will be ready for any violence that they may undertake against me."

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

It was my pleasing duty to stand up for Omaha artistically last week in this column, and Mr. Clement Chase came in for a more or less indulgent criticism. Mr. Chase—the St. Clement of Omaha—comes back handsomely in the editorial page of his paper and acknowledges his faults and promises to do better, for first, he approaches me with reverence, as he should, and alludes to me as "Father" Kelly (this will delight my mother, who always wanted me to be a clergyman), and in the second place, St. Clement says in cold type that "the Excelsior never claimed to be a society paper" and, in the third place, Mr. Chase shows by his article and his numerous references to Bee articles of times past that he has been making a careful study of the musical column of The Bee, and that he has been reading, marking, learning and inwardly digesting the truth contained therein. Such honest repentance, conversion and attempt to learn the right way, as set forth Sunday after Sunday in The Bee, should appeal to every person's spirit of forgiveness, and it certainly does to mine.

If the Excelsior keeps on reading The Bee carefully and sincerely, with its best understanding, people may begin to read the Excelsior.

There is a truth, as old as the eternal hills, but sadly neglected, and that is found in these words: "Like attracts like." If one could only apply that constantly the world would be a better place to live in, for right is always stronger than wrong. It has more endurance, more patience, and always wins out in the long run. Therefore the cohesion of all right thinking people would wonder. But we fall because we neglect to apply the means to the conditions. In other words, we lack Faith. And then, again, we lack Works. Faith without Works is dead. Faith and Works are the two things that make the combination of these two, Faith and Works, would do great things for us. If we are seeking for higher ground to work on, for more helpful environments to be surrounded by, for better opportunities of service, we can accomplish what we are desiring. First, we must have cheerful, abiding, persistent faith that the one thing desired will come. This must never be overcome by Doubt, for Doubt is actually and truly, "He that doubteth is damned," whether you take it in connection with its context or just as I have quoted it.

I had gotten just this far when Rev. Edwin East, pastor of the First Presbyterian church came into the particular editorial room in which the musical critic does his work and inquired for some information. The subject of Sunday writings came up, and I showed Dr. Jenkins what you have just read, remarking that I feared that I was encroaching upon his territory. But I had been very much struck with a line from a book by Ralph W. Trine, in which he said that God did feed the sparrows, to be sure, but he never threw the food into their nest. There is my idea for this homily on Faith without Works.

Dr. Jenkins then gave us a little talk on the subject and said: "A good illustration of that idea is the building of the Central Pacific. The men who, with Collis P. Huntington, went to work upon that apparently impossible task of applying the great engineering feat, because those men backed up their faith by their dollars, their worldly goods, their everything, in the face of ridicule and laughter of their friends, for faith and works being a strong combination, the following ones laugh." Dr. Jenkins went on to show that there was no necessity for us to be discouraged if we would only realize the actual dynamic powers of a living faith. It is the living force in that little seed-grain that does the business.

The student who wants success must fulfill these conditions and the results will come. If a student has no faith, or, in fact, if the student has not complete faith in the teacher, the student ought to either water the faith-seed or change teachers. If the teacher has not implicit faith in the possibilities of the pupil he should advise the pupil to seek another teacher.

If the pupil has faith in the fact that she will, one day, be among the best singers of the country, she must first begin by being (not posing as, or
