

GRAIN AND PRODUCE MARKET

Weather is King on 'Change and Letter is Quiet as Result.

DEMANDS ARE POOR AND SALES ARE FEW Predictions of Frost Stimulate Closing Prices, but Buyers Are Absent, Thus Shutting Off Much Trade.

OMAHA, June 25, 1904. These days of apathy on the local grain exchange indicate plainly that speculators did not overlook themselves when they declared that the poor and advanced freight rates would cast a damper on business during the latter part of the present season.

There was a considerable amount of fluctuation in prices of corn and wheat, but on the whole business was painfully dull. Wet weather coming so near to harvest time had a tendency to work prices down, but demand was absent.

Corn was steady momentarily, but with a few dull spots. Demand was for a little or no disposition to buy at any price.

Wheat was in a similar position. Demand was for a little or no disposition to buy at any price.

Receipts of Omaha Market. Wheat, 10,000 bushels; corn, 15,000 bushels; oats, 5,000 bushels.

Notes of the Grain Market. There is no sign of an early movement for wheat on account of wet conditions in the West.
