The census list will appear in tomorrow's paper.
Wise boys will not look too closely to see if the fuse is lighted.
The Declaration of Independence is pretty good reading even at this late day.
If Grover Cleveland did not have his failing to fall back on he would, indeed, be in hard lines.
While you are rejoicing in America's Independence please have a little solicitude for the members of the fire department.
Judge Parker says he has confidence in the democratic party, but what he really wants to know is how much confidence the party has in him.
Fortunately, Fourth of July orators are not expected to confine themselves strictly to the rules laid down by the logicians—or by the theologians.
Perhaps Mr. Parker's silence has been due to the strain of having to think of something to say in the letter of acceptance which he is probably preparing.
There will probably be more powder burned today than on any one day of the revolutionary war—and the casualties will be greater than in any of its battles.
While it is known that every plank in the republican platform hit the mark, the ones doing the greatest execution will be emphasized after the democrats shall have spoken.
As long as both the Russians and Japanese expect a big battle there is little probability of it taking place. Big battles must usually start when one of the parties is not ready.
Alabama yielded to New York on the roll call for presidential nominations at Chicago, and Alabama will also yield to New York on a similar roll call at St. Louis, but there all similarity between the conventions will probably end.
Although Senator Gorman doubtless heard that his absence from the Maryland delegation may be taken as an evidence of his intention to accept the presidential nomination if tendered, he did not flag the train as it passed his home.
The landseekers at Bonesteel are up against the usual crowd of "sure thing" men, who try to work such gatherings for suckers. They have all been duly warned, so if any of them get caught they will evoke little sympathy when they holler.
The populists will start in at Springfield two days ahead of the democrats at St. Louis. In view, however, of the records for long distance speaking achieved by some of the populist leaders there is no telling which will get through first.
The democratic platform will in one respect be an endorsement of the Roosevelt administration, for all are agreed that it will contain a plank saying in substance, "Turn the grafters out of office," and the president has been doing that as fast as they have been exposed.

ALL EYES ON ST. LOUIS.

For the next five or six days all eyes will center in St. Louis and all eyes will be riveted on the democratic national convention. While the prospects for the eclipse of Theodore Roosevelt in the political horizon by the election of a democrat to the presidency of the United States is decidedly unpromising, there is nevertheless universal popular interest in the outcome of the irrepressible conflict now in progress in the exposition city.

The ablest political strategists anticipate the nomination of a dark horse after a fierce and protracted struggle. Notwithstanding the tremendous efforts that are being made by democratic resurrectionists to project Grover Cleveland into the forefront as the logical candidate of the undivided democracy, there is not the remotest chance for his nomination unless the two-thirds rule shall be abrogated, and this is not likely to happen in a convention where the minority is made up largely of a phalanx of fighters under the leadership of Bryan.

The nomination of Judge Parker by a two-thirds vote is equally improbable. The same element that opposes Cleveland is equally if not more hostile to Parker, who will be out of the running unless he receives a two-thirds vote on the second ballot. The contest over the platform will be almost as exciting as the contest that will follow in the balloting for presidential candidates. The divergence on vital issues that are to be brought to the forefront in the impending campaign is, if anything, more irreconcilable than the divergence in the candidates.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.
The one hundred and twenty-eighth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence finds the republic that was heralded to the world July 4, 1776, still firm on its foundations, still strong in the love and patriotic devotion of the people, and still presenting to mankind the highest and best example of free institutions the world has known.

The recurrence of this anniversary appeals to the patriotism and the loyalty of every citizen and its influence should give strength and vigor to these sentiments. What a mighty nation we have grown to be in the little more than a century and a quarter since it was proclaimed to the world that the united colonies "are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states." In that period our free institutions have been subjected to the severest tests and have been strengthened and more firmly established by every trial, while our material development has given us leadership among the nations. What American does not feel proud on this day of the fact that his country has become the greatest industrial nation of the world, that in its commerce it is excelled by no other country and that in its wealth and resources it is unsurpassed? As a world-power the influence of the United States is everywhere felt and respected.

Considerations of these conditions must on this anniversary of the natal day of the republic stir the pride and stimulate the patriotism of every American citizen. Grant that there are some things which justify complaint. We have not yet, it must be admitted, found an absolutely perfect system of government. There are defects, there are wrongs, there are shortcomings. All realize this and the hope and aim of all is to remedy what is amiss. Yet on the whole no other nation has done so much as this in the interest of free institutions, of civilization and of the elevation of mankind, and this is enough to warrant the American people in earnestly and enthusiastically celebrating this anniversary.

The Fourth of July is our greatest holiday. It is an occasion that not only inspires patriotic fervor, but also invites thought upon the heroic deeds of the men 1776, to whose wisdom and courage and self-sacrifice we of today owe so much. It is a time for serious thinking about what those great men did and for resolving that we shall be faithful to the wonderful work they accomplished in creating this republic. The American people, with more than a century and a quarter of republican government, maintained through foreign wars and civil strife, and with a marvelous progress in wealth and power, have abundant reason for faith in the permanence of the republic and for looking hopefully to the future.

WILL NOT PROTECT HAYTI.
The announcement comes from Washington that our government will not protect Hayti in the matter of the demands of France and Germany, unless these are excessive or oppressive. It is given out in connection with this statement that it is not the policy of the United States to protect the independent governments of this hemisphere against proper demands on the part of foreign governments arising out of violations of international obligations, such as is alleged to be involved in the attack on foreign ministers in Hayti.

It would seem that these independent governments should understand by this time that they cannot depend upon the United States for protection when they deliberately offend against international law and the obligations they have entered into in their relations with other countries. The mistake that some of them make is in regarding the Monroe doctrine as affording them complete security no matter what their offense may be. It has no such purpose. That doctrine means simply that the United States, for its own peace and security, will not permit a European power to seize territory in this hemisphere or to set up anywhere here its political institutions. It does not propose to interfere with any territory already in
