Man Who Stole Many Unsigned Bank Notes.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.-Robert B. Taylor of New York, who confessed stealing unsigned bank notes to the amount of $6,729 from the Citizens' Central National bank of New York City, today made restitution, having given his check for $200 to Henry Demse, cashler of the bank, to make good the difference between the amount of the notes found upon him when arrested and the amount stolen.

The fact that restitution has been made, nowever, will make no difference in the rosecution of the case, as the United States district attorney says that Taylor will be brought before the November fed-eral grand jury. Taylor is desirous of being taken to New York for trial, but as he has already waived a preliminary hearing before the United States commission here, the prosecution will continue in this city. Taylor is charged with having in his possession forged and altered bank notes of the United States.
