THE YOUNG MAN CHAZE,

Plea for Men Who Have Not Outgrown Their Unefniness. Baltimore News.

An interesting discussion is going on in the columns of the New York Journal of Commerce concerning a matand of what may, without exaggeration, of the capable middle-aged man, thrown be called pressing importance. It is the extreme difficulty which people who have reached or passed middle age and who have in some way been thrown out of their accustomed business or work, encounter In securing appropriate employment. That empondent in the civil war, says that he this difficulty is not due solely to the incan recall the names of only seven other herent drawbacks under which older peocorrespondents of that period who are still ple labor in comparison with younger ones, we are firmly convinced. It is in large measure owing to a fixed and unreasoning and exaggerated prejudice, which shuts the door to proper consideration o cases on their merits, and which, like all other prejudices, has the faculty of waxing big on very little food.

The fact is that there are thousands of persons between 50 and 70 who are every are now more than 25,000 free rural routes bit as valuable as they ever were, and in many respects more so. It is a shame that when these persons are thrown out of their old connections through one of those turns in affairs that are now so frequent they abould be debarred from an opening for their activities through the application of as it is hourtless.

One writer of a letter in the Journal of Commerce of this morning states his case as follows:

I am 50 years old, and after a rigid exammation by a life insurance company a short time age I was pronounced a line risk—in other words, physically sound. I can walk farther, do more work and do it more accurately than half of the so-called young men. I have a good record, a glitedge list of references; have always been a total abstainer and a hard worker, never stole a dollar, never gambled a dollar in any way, shape or form, and have always led an exemplary life. I have held responsible positions all my business life, and am now out of employment through the fallurs of my employers. I have answered hundreds of advertisements, but so far have not been able to locate myself; as soon as would be employers see my gray hair then there is some excuse given, and that terminates the interview, and nothing more is heard from it.

ons, here in Baltimore, where a man of excellent record, of fine general abilitys in office work, and specially well equipped in one particular and important line, having been thrown out of an excellent posttion by a general reorganisation in concern with which he was connected, has found it impossible to get employment in anything like his old line; and this man cases, where a man has a family to supmaintain in ample comfort, is pretty sure to be unless he is a man of exceptional moral fiber-a steady deterioration of the man; a sad tale of decline for the individual and of loss to the community. It is difficult to point out any way to make head against this condition of things. But each person, in his degree, who has the question come up before himself in individual cases, can do something to lessen its bardship. It requires more brains, as well as more humanity, to act upon each case according to its merite than to adopt-or even virtually to adopt -a castiron age-limit rule. The mun of 50 or 60 who applies for a given position may be a man who will be theroughly satisfactory. Shall bide in dens of shame tonight.

Each, where his tasks or pleasures call, They pass, and heed each other not. There is who heeds, who holds them all, In The large love and boundless thought These struggling tides of life that seem In wayward, similans course to tend. Are eddles of the mighty stream That rolls to its appointed end.
