Case of Bougins County.

In Dougins county the assessment has not been increased as much proportionately as in some other counties, and on the face it would seem ag if there had been some preconcerted arrangements in Douglas ominty to hold down the assessment to the detriment of other sections of the state.

I severt that we have had the most conscientions and most efficient assessment of property in Douglas county, and especially in the city of Omaha, that we have ever bad. Where numerous assessors act separately, although, perhaps, under an agree-ment, like the one quoted here, that they would masses at one-stath, it depends on the rodividual intelligence and integrity of its different dissessors. Under that western the assessment might have been returned extremely low in some wards and quite high in others. I remember that one promloant business man told his not long ago that an qualisor last year came around to see him and insimuled that he wanted to purchase certain articles without paying for them. He said, I want certain lines of goods. I am the assessor and I can do you a good deal of good. The merchant refused to give this man the goods he wanted, and when the acceptances came out he was raised several thousand dollars. Such could not be carried out now because the county assessor having the control and supervision of the entire assessment can very readily detect any material diversion or decream or increase and can correct the mistakes, or worse than mistakes, of their

Compete loy of Assessor Reed. It has been said that Douglas county made a low assessment, and yet it has been shown here by the figures gathered by Mr. Reed that in many instances assessments of property in the business part of Omaha have been very materially creased, while in the suburban portions of the town there has been a dropping down. Governor Mickey-You mean to say that in the outlying districts where it was platted years ago that there has been a depreciation? Mr. Rosewater-Much of that to dead properly, and it is a question whether they would bring enough under the hammer to

Mr. Rosswater-Not so far as I know. I am not famillar with the assessor's books, but so far as I can learn, there has not been very much ground for complaint. I have investigated by asking real estate dealers and people familiar with realty values, how close the assessment comes to the actual values, and from all I can learn they have all continue that Mr. Reed to the most competent man in our city for this work and does his work conscientiously. And yet there may be instances when property may have escaped him, or through the inervention of the county board there may should have been an increase, but that is infinitesimal when you consider the aggre- works. Take their statement to the stockgate valuation is over $35,000,000.
