NEW BOOKS AND MAGAZINES

An Attractive Collection of Views of Omaha Showing Material Growth.

SEPTEMBER MAGAZINES UP TO STANDARD

An Able Discussion of Roosevelt and the Postal Frauds in McClure's by William Allen

White.

Every one who is interested in the material growth and prosperity of Omaha will be pleased with the collection of Views of Omaha which have been ar ranged by Henry F. Kieser, of this city, the work being done by the Albertype company, of Brooklyn, N. Y. There are twenty platinum finished photographs in this collection. A view of our new auditorium adorns the outside of the cover, and a bird's eye view of Omaha is the frontispiece. There are very good views of the city hall, the court house, the new high school building and the new postoffice building, the latter taken so as to show the east and south views. There are a number of street scenes, the Union Pacific bridge, one of the water-falls at the Florence reservoir and Minnelusa station scoumping house). Our industries are reppesented by views of the stock yards at South Omaha, the smelter and Union Pacific shops, together with a couple of park views. The greatest regret is that this collection does not include views of some of our good business blocks, shurches and residence streets. It is a collection, however, that will prove very attractive, as the work is good and the arrangement

Harper's Bazar for September is full of interesting things from cover to cover. Beside the continuation of the seriel story, "The Masquerader," there are three short stories, fashion illustrations and suggestions, together with the Paris letter, which always appeals to women, and some very good suggestions for September dinners and luncheons. The servant question and the value of college training for women are also touched upon, besides all the other good things, too numerous to mention,

The Century for September is their round-the-world number, and it fully earns the name. Russia, Alaska, Java, Spain, France and other countries are brought before us by art, by fiction, by description. America is represented by a very fine paper, the first of a series on "Fossil Wonders of the West." The usual highgrade fiction and illustrations complete the Short Stories, for September, lives up to Its name. Some of them are very good; none are bad; most are clever. It's a magazine for the hammock or the verandah,

The September McClures has an able discussion of "Roosevelt and the Postal Frauds," by William Allen White, and a further paper on "The Price of Oil," by Ida M. Tarbell. The serial by George Madden Martin is continued, John La Farge's masterpleces of paintings has done much for McClures-and this fifth paper is one of the best. Then there is the usual high grade fiction-that made Mc-Clures famous and some dainty illustrations in color-even better than those for

. Harpers' Magazine for September has some clever and dainty fiction by Justus Mills Foreman, Edwin Lefevre, J. Storer Clouston and Hilda Mabee, poems by Van Dyke, Sophie Jewett and others, a part of Mrs. Ward's serial, articles on astronomy and ant life and a discussion of international law by Judge Advocate General Davis, U. S. A. These are only a few random selections and you can see what the general excellence must be. The art, and then even a witty Irishman or two are features and departments are unusually found. Published by the Henry T. Coates

St. Nicholas, the old favorite, comes with a most attractive table of contents for September. The two serials, one developed along interesting lines, "Brittany, the Land of the Sardine," is a description that all boys and girls will read. The short stories are up to the St. Nicholas standard, and there is a good deal of pretty verse and illustrations. The usual departments are well sustained.

tractive array of short fiction by popular authors. The series of art studies by with the convenient size of the volumes. Sarony adds a good deal to the worth of the issue. Eden Philipotts contributes one of the best stories.

"Methods of Industrial Peace," by Nicholas Paine Gilman. The author says "the object of this work is to aid in the better comprehension and the wider diffusion of the principles and the methods of industrial peace." The work includes chapters are really several, was the man in the on the combination of employers and of employes, collective bargaining, the incorporation of trade unions, industrial war, conciliation, trade arbitration and the New Zealand system of dealing with labor disputes. The general tone is one of impartial judgment on employers and work-people. in the interests of the public. The treatment is concrete, numerous documents being given. The volume closes with chapters on the case for legal regulation and the essential conditions of industrial peace, Published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

"Henderson," by Rose E. Young, resembles "A Gentleman from Indiana" in its Thomas Y, Crowell & Co. faithful pictures of western types. The hero is a Missourian, high-spirited, kindly and tenacious, who pursues his rugged way with indomitable courage to success. His winning of professional fame, of independence and of the woman he loves is a story unusual attractiveness. Published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

"William Hickling Prescott," by Rollo Ogden. This book is one of the "American Men of Letters" series published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co. This new life of Prescott the editor of the Evening Post is a study rather of a personality than of an historian. While Prescott's writings are by Robert Crombie (The Saalfield com-
