The Manawa and Argo immediately left the other boats and started the fight between themselves. They made for the point buoy first, the Manawa footing faster, with the Argo pointing up into the wind a little better. The Manawa gradually got the lead and rounded the point buoy first. On the quarter run to the bay buoy the Manawa increased its lead. The next leg was a long beat to the far buoy, and again the Manawa increased its lead. On the run home before the wind the boats played about even. On the second round the Manawa maintained the same lead, except on the windward work the Argo gained ten seconds. The fine: Manawa crossed the line one minute and fifty-five seconds in the lead. The time: Manawa crossed the line one minute and fifty-five seconds in the lead. Superintendent of Schools Addresses Four Hundred of His Co-Workers.

DEALS WITH IMPORTANCE OF CALLING

On Eve of the New School Year Re Emphasizes the Necessity of Devotion to the Work.

Superintendent Davidson made an address to the 400 teachers of the public schools who assembled yesterday morning at the city hall preparatory to the opening of the schools today. The superintendent dealt with the subject of teaching in such a way as to show the importance of the work and the courage and devotion that should be given to so high a calling.

The Spanish-American war, he said, was the victory of the public schools over the powers of ignorance and the triumph of the American teacher over the powers of darkness. The secret of success in this war the speaker found to lie in the fact that every soldier and sailor had been taught by an American teacher in an American school. Continuing, the superintendent

"I repeat it-our victory is the glorious triumph of the American schools. "It is not arithmetic, nor geography, nor grammar, nor Latin, nor mathematics, nor science that we wish to develop in our boys and giris, but hale and robust matehood; sweet and lovely womanhood. That stone others may reject, but we must make It the 'chief stone of the corner.'

"It is not citizenship merely, but good citizenship with which we are most concerned. The noblest product of education is the good citizen. Any system of public education which comprises less than this in the scope of its aim and purpose is, and ought to be, a fallure.

"Any teaching, no matter how brilliant and otherwise successful, which does not have this in view as the culmination of its ideal fails utterly in its comprehension of the educational problem in its relation to the republic."

"The country of today is due to the ideals of yesterday and our country tomorrow. therefore depends upon the ideals of today The ideas of the framers of the declaration of independence and the constitution did not find expression nor realization until the emancipation proclamation and the fifteenth amendment."

He spoke of the unrest and the conflicts in the country, citing the Chicago railway etrike and the recent labor troubles in Colorado as instances.

"Out of this conflict of ideas," said Superintendent Davidson, "out of this strife out of this unrest, has come the progress of the world's history. The danger to the republic does not lie here half so much as in the fact that when the citizen of the future shall be called upon to decide questions which have at stake obedience to existing law and loyalty to country, he may be found upon the wrong side.

"The aim of the public schools should be to so instill lessons of devotion to country that when the citizen of the future shall be called upon to decide questions that involve the safety and welfare of the republic, there can be no question as to what his decision shall be, even if that decision means he must needs die for his country.'

"What the public school demands today is that lessons of patriotism shall so firmly be fixed that when the Robert E. Lees and Stonewell Jacksons of the future shall be called upon to deride where they shall be found in the hour of their country's peril, they shal! respond with that better and more loyal sentiment, Country first, heartstrings afterwards."

"In this city of homes and schools and churches, I magnify the home as the greatest educational factor of them all. It stands at the heart's core of our civilization today, and at its very center lies a. little child upon whom the whole future of the race depends.

"Fellow teachers, I recognize the discouragements and heartaches that often ome to us in the midst of our daily work. heavy are the burdens at times that we often wish we were not teachers.

"May it not be that amid the din and tumult and discouragements of your delly work that it sometimes seems as though you, too, were doing naught worth the doing-toiling down there in obscurity, unthought of and unnoticed by the great busy world-simply beating out the task upon the cisttering keyboard which the great master has set before you.'

"But do it well! Do it as the violet smiles; as the bird sings; as He, the greatest of all great teachers lived, and you, too, will send out over land and over sea, music which shall bless the generations afar off.

packers should pay living wages to em ployes and that broken time should be done r.way with, in order that the men could earn enough to properly raise familles and educate their children. He con cluded by saying that the common peopie were the backbone of the country and that the people had in their power, through the ballot, to change the existing condition of affairs. Encourages the Men.

Harry B. Fleharty, one of the attorneys for the union men, was the next speaker. Mr. Fleharty, in his introductory remarks followed to some extent along the lines of Mr. Smyth. Getting down to conditions in South Omaha, Mr. Fleharty said: "If we go down to defeat we will know that we fought in the right cause. This fight was not brought about by a mere question of wages. It was for the purpose of fighting the opposition of the pack-ers to unions and to organized labor in general. He encouraged the union men and declared that by a little more patience on the part of the men now on strike the battle might be won. Reference was made to the Japanese now employed in the packing houses. In speaking of these men the speaker said that the good people of South Omaha would not tolerate their presence here and that it would not be long before the packing houses were cleared of Japanese and southern negroes and the old men taken back to work.

SURPRISE FOR BIG GRIZZLY Carlous Bruin Takes a Photograph of Himself While Examining a

Bort Gibbs is the amateur photographer bear hunter of all Round Valley, Cal. But he doesn't hunt that class of subjects since a big Mendocino grisaly took his camera away from him. He had shot everything in his neighborhood, and to his prized collection of snaps of living birds, squirrels and deer he longed to add the photograph of a live bear-one with a flerce whiskered phis, with tongue lolling out and eyes gleaming in all the savage fire of lowest brutedom.

He was brave, was Bert, and filled with the enthusiasm of the true "flend" took his solitary way into the far woods armed with his leaded picture box. While cautiously beating up a huckleberry patch, trying to flush his bear, he fell over a bank and bodly sprained his ankle. After lying all night disabled where he had fallen he concluded that he was doomed to remain there till he starved to death. He photographed in his mind his emaciated body found days 'August hence, and the sad idea came to him to take a last 'shot' at himself. He had August A take a last "shot" at himself. He had heard that people in the last ditch always reserved last shots for their personal uses. He would do this, and the faithful camera would give up a farewell view of him taken while dying.

Then he fastened a string to the shutter of the machine, placed it on a log and was beginning to "look natural" before it when a huge grizzly lumbered out of the brush fanche. Gibbs heaved himself in one mighty spring. His ankle was disabled, but he found no difficulty in getting up a near-by tree. The bear paid no attention to him, but, squatting himself on his haunches, proceeded to instruct himself in camera craft. He picked it up with his forepaws and was making a minute examination with eyes and nose when the shutter snapped. The sharp sound frightened him, and, dropping the box, he galloped off into the woods. Gibbs came down from the tree cured of the sprain, picked up his camera and went home. Then he developed the photograph which the grizzly had taken of itself with the last shot he had reserved for himself .-San Francisco Call.

No Advantage. "How much is beefsteak a pound?" asked the bride of a month. "Eighteen cents," replied the butcher. "Why, I thought that the strike had sent prices away up." "Well, mom, we got this meat before the strike began. We got it two months ago, when prices were down, and we can't take advantage of our regular customers."-Cleveland Leader.

was in good shape. Anything at all desirable changed hands readily enough at good, strong prices and some sales looked a little higher. Common kinds of course were not as brisk, but still even those commanded steady prices without much trouble. A good clearance was made at a reasonably early hour.

The cow market was also active, with prices steady to strong as compared with last week's close. There was quite a liberal sprinkling of cows in the receipts, but still there were none too many and most everything was out of first hands at an early hour. The better the quality the more readily they sold.

Bulls, yeal calves and stags said in much the same notches they have for some time past.

the same notches they have for some time past.

Very few stockers and feeders were cirried over from last week, so that speculators were all looking for fresh supplies. With the limited number on sale the market ruled active and strong on good stuff, with others steady. Some of the better grades sold as much as a dime higher than the same kinds brought on Friday. 110435—There was a light run of hogs in sight this morning, but the malket was in rather unsatisfactory condition. Some of the buyers started out and bought about ten loads at prices ranging from $5.25 to $5.40, and after that the market came to a standatil and but little was done for some time. Buyers were only offering from $5.15 to $5.25, or about like sunday's close, while salesmen were holding for the morning prices. Shippers did not seem to be in the market and consequently there was no improvement, and most of the hogs sold in about those notches. The heavy weights were largely from $5.25 to $5.25, and occasionally something of light weight and good quality brought a triffe more than that. It was a slow, draggy market from start to finish, and at noon there were still several loads in first hands. Representative
