NEW YEAR'S COMES ONCE MORE

Jews Begin Celebration of Their Glad Harvest Festival.

RABBI COHN DISCOURSES ON FATE

Congregation at Temple Israel Hears Eloquent Sermon on God's Way with Man and Nations and Their Responsibility.

"Happy New Year" in black and white flowers greeted the worshippers at Temple Israel Friday night as they crowded the synagogue for the first service of the Jewish sacred holiday, Rosh Hashona. This is the first day of the festivals of Judaism, which come with the harvest time, and every member of the temple congregation was present, the choir sang special and effective music and Rabbi Frederick Cohn discoursed eloquently on "Fate." This service is in the nature of a memorial to those who have died during the year, and the rabbi read with eloquence the beautiful prayer prescribed by the ritual for the occasion. This morning the sermon will be on "Duty." Sunset marks the close of the first day of Tishri, and nine days following comes the concluding day, Yom Kippur.

"As we stand on the threshold of the new year," said Rabbi Cohn, "behind us all the past, before us the dim, uncertain future, we cannot repress a feeling of anxiety, we cannot help asking what the future has in store for us. As earnest men and women, as those with experience of joys and sorrows, as those who know the manifold chances, who know the changes a day may bring forth, how suddenly a blow may descend—it is but natural, but human, on this night of nights, with fate trembling in the balance, we should be filled with a certain trepidation and repentance. How shall we fare? What fate, what destiny is in store for the year to come, for the year which has begun? Will it be for us a year of joy of one of sorrow, a year of joy or of death?"

What Fate Consists In.

The speaker then turned to that portion of the world which believes in fate and thinks whatever is to be, will be, and was decreed. He told of the ancient fatalists when all the peoples were felt to be under the influence of fate. The Mohammedans, the rabbi found, as the present day example of this idea in the extreme. He said of the many who now view the clairvoyants as being in store for the year to come, for the year which has begun? Will it be for us a year of joy of one of sorrow, a year of joy or of death?"

KENNEDY IN SECOND WARD

Republican Candidate for Congress Addresses Crowded Club Meeting.

WHY HE WILL WIN OVER HITCHCOCK

Conditions of the Campaign of Two Years Ago and Now Contrasted and Attitude of the Parties Explained.

John L. Kennedy, republican nominee for congress, was the principal speaker at a well attended meeting of Second ward republicans in their club headquarters on South Sixteenth street Friday night. Others who talked were Mike Lee, candidate for the legislature, and Fred Behm and Fred Bruning, who are contesting with others for the nomination for county commissioner.

Mr. Kennedy was greeted with loud applause, which was repeated when he intimated that he would present the Second Ward Marching club with a stand of colors. He thanked the Second ward voters for their support at the primaries and spoke mostly on national issues, pointing out the necessity of electing a republican congressman from the Second district. He took occasion to reply to his democratic critics for permitting the greater part of the congressional committee to be named by the nominating convention.

One-Man Committee Ends.

"I may be wrong," said he, "but I believe that when the convention had confidence enough in me to nominate me as a candidate for congress that I should have confidence enough in the convention to let it name the committee for me. The one-man committee is at an end. I feel that I represent the voters and that this campaign is their campaign, not mine. I simply aim to represent the people of the district, and it is on their support that I am relying to send me to Washington if I go there."

"I am here tonight to tell you where I stand as opposed to my democratic opponent, Mr. Hitchcock, whom I think would find difficulty in defining his position on a great many important questions, whether or not he adheres to the platform adopted by his party at St. Louis. I stand for a constructive policy of government, a policy of building up, not of tearing down."

Conditions Have Changed.

"Two years ago far different conditions confronted the republicans of the Second district than now. Today the whole party is behind the nominee. I don't know of a single republican in the district who would refuse to vote for me as the party nominee, or who could give any good reason for such a refusal. It is my desire to be nominated and elected by the party as a whole and to represent the party as a whole. We have never proposed nominees for the

OLD-TIMER COMES TO TOWN

Veteran Offender of Law is Recognized by Chief of Detectives.

While working out a small police court fine by cleaning the police patrol barn, James W. Harris, known to the police a year ago by as "The Swede," was recognized Friday afternoon by Captain Dunn as a man who was sentenced in police court eight years ago for a larceny. The captain asked Harris about his old pal and Harris looked at the captain in a surprised manner and said:

"Well, I ain't seen Pat for several years. He drifted out to Seattle, I ain't heard. The last time I saw him he gave me a chew out at the 'Prisco docks, and then I came east. I ain't been doing much lately—just drifting around."

STRIKERS ARE BOUND OVER

Three Men Held on Charge of Assaulting Men Who Took Their Jobs.

James Murphy, John Kerns and Dennis McGuire, strikers, were arraigned before United States Commissioner Anderson yesterday on a charge of interfering with strike breakers. After a brief hearing the accused were bound over to the federal grand jury in the sum of $500 each.

There now remains only the case in the United States circuit court, where a number of strikers are cited to show cause why they should not be committed for contempt. These cases will be finally disposed of early next week.
