Dinners and hop at the Country and Field clubs.

Last week brought fulfillment of the prophecy that there would be plenty doing when society got home, for, while Omnha's fashionables are still pretty well scattered about over the face of the earth, the first of September has come and with it many of those who summered out of town, and there has been a promising lot of affairs, little and fairly big, that, with the two large weddings of Wednesday and the three large dancing parties given for the college set, made the week seem lively indeed. Of course there is a lot of gossip in the air, for society, like everybody else, has to go away from home to get the real news about itself. But there is plenty of news-making material right here at home just at prosent, by the way, and besides this there is alwaya Fort Crook, which, like any other army post, always abounds in interesting possibilities, especially when there chances to be a number of bachelor officers stationed there, and the Thirtieh infantry is particularly well equipped in this respect. And two of these same young officers are contributing just at present to a little affair that society is watching with interest. One of them, a young captain, had been all devotion to one of the sweetest of last season's debutantes and all seemed well until more experienced charms of a young divorcee, conceded to be the most fascinating woman in society, suddenly turned the officer's attention. But he, too, was destined soon to learn the meaning of fickleness, for it has been perfectly evident for a few weeks that the lady now prefers the society of a young lieutenant. The captain is doing duty out of town just at pres-

The all important question going the rounds of the club verandas and other fashionable rendezvous just now is, "What is the really correct thing to wear at the horse show?" It is not that Omaha society is so unaccustomed or uninitiated in the correct thing that it ordinarily needs posting on how to appear at fashionable functions, but the fact is, rather, that the privilege of creating fashions in the way of extraordinary innovations does not extend oute this far west, and it is not unnatural that in this, its initial experience in com-

WOMAN IN CLUB AND CHARITY

The New York City Federation, that great combination of clubs of Greater New York, will hold its annual meeting October 28, and the prospect is that its attendance will be large. It will meet at the New Astor hotel, and the matter of supporting a deaconess for the stricken St. Marks district, which includes the majority of the families of the General Slocum disaster, will be taken up as one of the important features of the session. Mrs. Dore Lyon is president of the federation, which is in a most flourishing condition, and, it is said, will support its president for the presidency of the New York State Federation at the annual state meeting this fall. The morning session will be in the hands of the ablic safety committee and the afternoon will be given over to the consideration of educational matters. Among other topics the equalization of teachers' wages will be cussed. The discrimination in favor of men, which has become so pronounced, not alone in the local schools, it is felt, is most unfair, the men being given higher salaries to start on and reach their maximum salary under much easier conditions than do the women

Some estimate of what just one club of women can do may be made from the work of the Woman's club of Newton Center, Mass. Organized chiefly for philanthropic work, the club has, during the past six years, given about $9,000 to charity and educational work, public playgrounds, the Associated Charities, Newton hospital and the Newton District Nurses' association being among the objects of its assistance. The decoration of schoolrooms and the supplying of magazines, books and pictures, besides the purchase of a $250 cooking plant and a $175 sloyd plant for the vacation schools has been a part of its work for 'education.

The following letter has been sent out to the Daughters of the Confederacy and "all of the women of the south" through the columns of the Keystone of Charleston by Mrs. C. Gilliland Aston of the Daughters of the Confederacy, and there is little doubt but that her suggestion will be acted upon:

Plenty of people in Omaha know all about horse shows, but there are many others who do not, for the simple reason that they have pever chanced to be in one of the cities where they are held during the season. Ordinarily one rather expects some anxiety among the women when there is an unusual social function in prospect, but on this occasion it seems to be the men who are inquiring what they shall wear, and to them be, it said that that depends upon the place from where they expect to view the show. For those who expect to participate, correct riding or driving costumes will be required, of course, and these costumes will be permissible in the boxes or on the boardwalk during the evening. For the men who will occupy boxes or season seats, nothing short of full dress will be proper; the high hat (not the opera hat, remember), white vest, gloves and all of the accessories to full dress. For the others who will occupy less conspicuous seats, the business suit will be allowable. The women are responding beautifully, and the milliners and modistes of the city are being taxed to provide costumes such as local fashionable femininity has never troubled itself to provide before. These costumes are not full dress, but rather the most elaborate reception tollets. The women who will not occupy boxes will be quite proper in their "best frocks," whataver they chance to be. The boardwalk will be open to all, and here
