CROCKER'S BRIGADE MEETS

Twelfth Biennial Reunion of Famous Organization Closes Session at Waterloo.

ATTENDANCE IS DECREASING EACH TIME

Iowa Soldiers and Sailors Meet to Discuss Experiences and Listen to Address by Commander and Others.

WATERLOO, Ia., Sept. 17--(Special.)--The twelfth biennial reunion of the survivors of the old Crocker Iowa brigade closed in this city last evening after an interesting two days' session. The enrollment of old soldiers has been about 550, thus falling short of that of 1902, when, at the reunion at Muscatine, the attendance was 625. Seventy of the wives of the veterans were present, so the visitors numbered over 600. Headquarters were at the Logan hotel and it was here that the comrades met and talked over old times. The campfires were held in the opera house Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. On the first evening a large audience, composed mostly of old soldiers, was on hand to hear the fine program that was prepared. Colonel W. H. Michael of the Navy department at Washington had been chosen two years ago to deliver the biennial address to the old soldiers. His theme was "Iowa Soldiers and Sailors."

Having been a member of this brigade, he was able to know exactly what the soldiers had endured. He told chiefly of the campaign along the Mississippi and the part played by the sailor boys of Iowa in the great civil war.

Quoting the speaker: "From the beginning of hostilities in the west until the close of the war there was not a battle fought near a navigable river that the gunboats did not take part in and render valuable service; and when we consider the fact that the Iowans were on nearly every vessel in the squadron during the war and that Iowa had commissioned officers on twenty-seven of them, we may justly claim as Iowans a full share in the honors and glory won by the gunboats on the Mississippi and its tributaries during the war. Furthermore, it establishes a substantial and enduring claim of Iowa sailors to have their memory inscribed on the monument erected by the generous patriotism of the state."

Something About Crocker.

General Jack Stibbs of Chicago, always a popular speaker at the gatherings of old soldiers, told several war stories and received a number of poems, which were recited with applause. Congressman Lacey and Governor Cummins also spoke. The former dwelt with sadness on the fact that the ranks are getting thinner each time of reunion and the step of the old soldier less elastic with each succeeding year.

Governor Cummins told of his visit to the old battlefields in the south recently. He told how he regretted the fact that when the war of the rebellion broke out he was too young to go, and how he vowed if his country ever needed him again he would not hesitate to offer himself to the cause. Thirty years later the call came and, making his promise good, he presented himself to the governor of the state, who replied that he was too old to learn the soldier's ways and life. He spoke felicitously and his speech made a deep impression on his hearers.

Crocker's Iowa brigade has existed for over forty years and is a firmly established organization. Marcellus M. Crocker, in whose honor the brigade was named, was born at Franklin, Ind., February 6, 1830. In 1849 he removed to Illinois, where he remained five years, and then came to Jefferson county, Iowa. Though in poor circumstances, he managed to secure enough education to allow him to enter West Point in 1851. Here he remained two years, resigning at the end of two years in order to support his mother.

Crocker studied law and settled in Des Moines in 1856. During the fall of 1860 the young men of the town organized a military company and unanimously made Law Crocker their captain. Three days after Fort Sumter was fired upon Captain Crocker tendered his company to President Lincoln. It was accepted and is known in the history of the war as Company B, Second Iowa Infantry. Crocker was commissioned colonel of the Thirtieth Iowa Infantry by Governor Kirkwood early in 1862 for valiant service at Corinth. He was placed in command of the Iowa brigade and accompanied General Sherman on his memorable march to the sea. General Crocker was compelled to leave the field at Decatur, Ala., on account of sickness and was sent by the War department to take a command in New Mexico, hoping that he might there regain his health. The hope was vain, however, on his return from New Mexico, in 1865, he died at Willard's hotel in Washington.

New Officers Elected.

The brigade was composed of the Eleventh, Thirteenth, Fifteenth and Sixteenth regiments. The Fifteenth was mustered in at Keokuk and the others at Davenport.

At the business meeting which was held yesterday morning the following officers were elected: President Colonel H. H. Hude, Mount Vernon, recording secretary, Charles W. Kepler, Mount Vernon; corresponding secretary, Mr. Bushnell, Council Bluffs; treasurer, Peter Kiess, Dubuque. The invitation of Clinton that the old soldiers hold their next reunion in that city was accepted. Because of the interest shown by Governor Cummins in the Crocker Iowa brigade he was chosen to be speaker for 1906. The meeting then adjourned.

LIFE OF BRITISH SOLDIER

Career that is Full of Hardship, Says One Who Tried It.

CONTEMPT OF OFFICERS FOR PRIVATES

Man Who Fought Boers Says They Were Superior, and Tells of Character of Various English Commanders.

David Gibson, an English soldier of twelve years' experience, arrived in the city Thursday from Montreal, Canada, in quest of his brother, William Gibson, who at one time worked at the Willow Springs distillery. The latter left the employ of that establishment several years ago, and his present whereabouts is unknown.

David Gibson has quite an interesting history, having served with Generals Buller, Methuen, Roberts and Kitchener in the South African wars.

"The treatment of the British soldier is not all that it is cracked up to be," said he. "In the South African war it was pretty tough. The command to which I was attached in that war marched afoot from Cape Town to Modder river and Kimberley. It was an awful march; much harder than anything we underwent in the Boer war. Our supplies did not keep up with us half the time, and we were on half rations almost continuously. We always wore under heavy marching orders, and the weight we carried continuously, with our guns, ammunition and kits, would reach forty to forty-five pounds.

Little Food in Country.

"There was little to live on off the country. Then, when we did finally reach Kimberley, we were not much better off. The siege there had reduced provisions to a very scant condition, and the rations were small. The climate was new to us, and many of the boys died of camp fever and African fever. Our duty tours were unceasing and heavy. The Boers never grew tired, but kept us on the watch constantly. Things changed a little for the better when General Roberts came, and supplies began to get through more regularly.

"Don't let anyone make you believe the Boers were not great fighters. England never went up against braver or better men, I think General Buller was one of our best fighters, but, then, he had certain weaknesses. Methuen was a good one, but he went wrong at the end. While Roberts was a splendid officer, the Boers were too much for him. I think he respected the cause for which they were fighting too much to go against them as hard as he might with his forces. Kitchener was a cold-blooded fellow and the best general in the English army. He had no regard for his men. Results was what he was after; and he never let up until he reached them.

Kitchener Compliments None.

"I never knew of General Kitchener complimenting an officer or a man for a heroic deed. The Boer war was full of heroic incidents.

"One of the great drawbacks to the English army in South Africa was in the character of the subaltern officers. They were generally inexperienced, soft-headed sons of a scrap that his company officers were very little preparation for the positions they were to hold. The rank and file had no confidence in them and then if a warrant officer or private should, in an extreme emergency, undertake to act on his own responsibility to get his detachment out of a scrape that his company officers had blundered into, he stood a better chance for a court-martial than he did for commendation or promotion.

The English soldier is regarded as but an inanimate tool or piece of machinery. A horse or mule is regarded with more consideration, as it possesses a money value, while the soldier has no value at all except in numbers to accomplish a certain end. There is an immeasurable distance between the private soldier and his officer that can never be overcome. The private fights because of his pride as an Englishman and because he believes the English soldier is unconquerable. If he is beaten he lays it to the incompetency of his officers. He is conscious of his blunders, but he is not permitted to prevent them, even when it is possible for him to do so.

Pride of English Soldier.

"An English soldier is proud of his uniform, his colors and his country and his king. He believes he is a part of the strong arm of the 'greatest nation of earth.' Pride and contempt keep him from acts of insubordination. As Kitchener is as general, so is the private soldier of England as a soldier--impassive, stoical, fearless and determined. His ambition is to conquer, and if he fails once, twice or a dozen times he is ever willing to continue the attempt. When success does come he thinks it but the inevitable consequence of his qualities as an English soldier."

JENNINGS TO BOOK CONCERN

Presiding Elder of Omaha Methodist District Will Go to Kansas City.

WAYNE, Neb., Sept. 17--(Special Telegram.)--The agents of the Western Methodist Book Concern have asked Rev. J. W. Jennings to become manager of the Kansas City depository and the bishop has consented to the appointment. It is with regret that the pastors of the district part with Dr. Jennings, as presiding elder. Who his successor will be is yet a cabinet secret.

It is rumored that Rev. M. A. Head, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of South Omaha, will go to Deadwood, S. D., for the coming year.

WOMAN IN CLUB AND CHARITY

At a preliminary meeting of the social science department of the Woman's club, held during the week, a general outline of the year's work was decided upon that promises to make that department one of the most efficient and interesting in the club. Four general branches were decided upon and a chairman appointed for each.

The property rights of women, Mrs. George Tilden, chairman, is the first; the Nebraska law to be given particular attention. Industrial conditions, Mrs. Smith, chairman; civic improvement, Miss E. E. McCartney, chairman, and juvenile courts, Mrs. M. J. Monette, chairman, will be the other branches, and the fourteen meetings of the winter will be divided up among these subjects. The first meeting of the year will be held soon after the state meeting in October and will be a social meeting combined with a vacation notes that will be responded to by all members of the department. As the social unity of members is especially desirable, a courtesies committee has been appointed, with Mrs. Henry McDonald chairman, for the purpose of bringing members into closer acquaintance, and during the winter by the department will be resumed. It was further decided that the regular meetings should be opened with current events on social topics, and Mrs. Clara Bux bank was appointed chairman to act with Mrs. Beach Taylor as leader of this. The department is under the general leadership of Mrs. E. B. Towle this year, with Mrs. Clara Burbank first assistant and Mrs. E. E. Adams second assistant. The regular meetings will begin about the middle of October.

It has been practically settled that the annual convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance union will be held at Los Angeles in 1905. Although no official announcement has been made of this, Los Angeles has long wanted the meeting, and the executive committee has agreed informally that its invitation of long standing shall be accepted next year, when special rates to the coast will insure a large attendance. The Omaha women had hoped to secure the convention next year, but it is believed now that, with the meeting held in Philadelphia this year and Los Angeles next year, they will stand a better chance in 1905, as the convention will then rightfully belong to the middle west, and their invitation was presented informally some time ago. November 23 to December 4 are the dates for this year's meeting, which will be held at Philadelphia.

According to the Washington Star, the managers of the republican national campaign have figured it out that Roosevelt's election or defeat may be determined by the vote of the women of the four suffrage states and accordingly they have secured the services of Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, president of the Women's Republican club of the United States, to stump Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho and Utah, for Roosevelt. In these four states, women vote on all matters just as men do, and it is anticipated that if the democrats make a winning fight in the east, Colorado may become a pivotal state and many of the Parker managers believe that it will be easier to carry the four suffrage states than to carry Indiana. In some of these states, the women cast from 40 to 50 per cent of the entire vote. The Denver News observes that a special brand of literature is being prepared for the women voters.

"The lessons of protection are being brought home to her. The housewife is shown how she enjoys protection on her raspberry preserves, and how the home market for perfumes can be invaded by the paper-made extracts from Europe. This is supposed to convert her to the principles of republicanism and protection. But it will take something stronger than raspberry jam and perfume as the foundation of a tariff argument to catch the western voting woman."

The Nebraska Women Suffrage association has issued a tenth annual meeting program to be followed by the clubs of the state. Its chief features are the roll call to be responded to by each member, telling what she has done for suffrage during the summer vacation, and the election of delegates to the annual state convention to be held at Geneva in November. The September Headquarters' Message will be read, which includes a detailed account of Miss Gail Laughlin's tour of the state this summer and what was accomplished by it.

Mrs. Nellie Beach Miller, corresponding secretary of the Nebraska Federation of Women's clubs, has issued the following announcement to the club women of the state through the club presidents:

OMAHA, Sept. 12, 1904--My Dear Madam: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Nebraska Federation of Women's clubs will be held in Seward October 11, 12 and 13, 1904. In the Methodist Episcopal church. A rate of one and one-half fare has been reduced over all railroads, provided 50 certificates costing less than 50 cents, are sold. Please remember that to secure this rate it is absolutely necessary for delegates and others attending the meeting from your town, to procure certificates from the secretary of each of the lines over which they are going to the meeting, and to present the same, immediately upon arrival at the transportation committee that they may be properly endorsed and returned immediately to Mrs. S. C. Langworthy.

The local entertainment committee requests that names of delegates be returned immediately to Mrs. S. C. Langworthy, Seward, that they may know the number of delegates to the annual state convention, and that they may know the names of those who will be attending.

The credentials and transportation committees will be in waiting at the church Tuesday morning, October 11, at 9 o'clock. The local entertainment committee requests that names of delegates be returned immediately to Mrs. S. C. Langworthy, Seward, that they may know the number of delegates to the annual state convention, and that they may know the names of those who will be attending.

Rooms and breakfast, in private families, will be furnished all speakers, officers, members of committees and delegates. A reduced rate of 25 cents per meal has been granted by the two leading hotels and restaurants of Omaha.

According to the constitution, article VIII, sections 1 and 2, all dues must be paid to September 15, 1905, before clubs are entitled to representation. If yours are not paid, kindly send them at once to Miss M. E. Sheldon, Columbus, that the officers may present a complete financial report to the convention. It is not possible to be prepared to pay your dues at Seward to the recording secretary, Subjects of special interest to the colored kindergarten church with the credentials committee on Tuesday morning. Miss Sheldon will also receive and certify to the dues of those who desire to make to the colored kindergarten work which the last convention voted unanimously to continue, articles to which are entirely voluntary.

As president of your club you are a member of the board of directors, and of the nominating committee. The program of the committee presents a program of unusual excellence. Special attention is given to club reports. It is hoped that every club will send one or more delegates; if yours cannot be represented kindly send a concise report of your year's progress to your corresponding secretary, who will present it for you. Mrs. Hinman, chairman of the educational committee, requests that each delegate bring to the educational conference a written report of what has been done in the interest of education in her own locality. This conference is included in the educational program of Tuesday afternoon. Subjects of special interest will be presented at each of the other conferences.

The list of speakers, outside of the federation, includes Miss Macrae, principal of Browning hall, Omaha; Judge Lindsey, Denver; Dan V. Stephens, Fremont; Prof. Miller, University of Nebraska; Dr. Lowry, Lincoln; Mrs. Miller, principal of the Chicago Domestic Science Training school; and Mrs. Nellie Beach Miller, member of the household economics committee of the general federation. The last named speaker or invited speaker will be a member of the household economics committee of the general federation. The last named speaker or invited speaker will be a member of the household economics committee of the general federation. The last named speaker or invited speaker will be a member of the household economics committee of the general federation.

The members of the executive board send to you and your club, through this announcement, their kindest greetings and express their belief that you will cooperate in making the coming meeting what the tenth convention should be, the banner meeting of the federation. Very truly yours, NELLIE BEACH MILLER, Corresponding Secretary.
