for the big flanking movement east so much talked of, has recognized the necessity of meeting the Russian advance by fortifying his position north of Liao Yang. The interval between the eventual collision will doubtless be utilized by both sides in feeling out their respective strength and dispositions and inactive skirmishing on the flanks, of which the daring march of the Cossacks across the Shakhe river almost to the Yental mines is an example. Not until the combined movements Kouropatkin's army are in full swing southward will it be seen whether Ovama intends to contest the present advance or fall back on the fortified positions north of Lino Yang, where he would reverse the situation hitherto, as the Japanese would for the first time enjoy the advantage of fighting behind defences.

Estimate of Jap Strength. According to the estimates of the War office Oyama's total strength is about 260 -

000 men, of which 150,000 are posted between the Hun river, to the west, and Bentsia putze, eastward, the remainder being held in reserve at Lian Yang. Kouropatkin disposes of nine corps, giving him perhaps a slight superiority in number,

Lieutenant General Grippenberg, who is to command the second Manchurlan army, will take with him to the front a large portion of the troops of the Vilna military district, over which he has had command for three years. Thus the bulk of the second army will be composed of men and officers and one man killed. of whom the general has intimate knowlteenth corps are included in the district. They are taking every precaution against possible counter attacks, throwing up entrenchments as they advance southward. Field Marshal Oyama, however, has not yet shown a disposition to strongly hold his outer positions. The evacuation of Bentslaputze left the flank of the Japanese position at the Yental mines improtected and news of the abundonment of the mines is, therefore,

The Japanese appear to be concentrating their forces in the fortifications formerly occupied by the Russians on the right bank of the Taitse river, which are exceedingly strong, and they have an equally good defence north and south. The Japanese retired from Bentsiaputze almost without a struggle, fearing that General Mistchenko's Cossscks would surround, the position and cut them off.

Jonanese Forces Retire. Bentslapurze is of the highest impor tance, commanding the roads from Mukden and Fushun to Liao Yang and Bensthu. Private advices from Mukden just re ceived indicate that the artillery is already at work.

An engagement is reported to have oc curred yesterday on the Russian right flank, fourteen miles southwest of Mukden. Such news of the Russian movements as may be given out without compromising the advance is likely to be telegraphed by General Kouropatkin each evening, after the day's work in the field is over.

NEW POSTMASTER GENERAL Robert J. Wynne, First Assistant, Succeeds the Late Henry C. Payne.

APPOINTMENT IS ONLY TEMPORARY

Statement that George B. Cortelyou Will Succeed Him About January 1-Plea Made for Post Canteens.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.-President Rooserelt today announced the appointment of Robert J. Wynne, acting postmaster general, as postmaster general.

The appointment of Mr. Wynne as a member of the president's cabinet was not unexpected by those in close touch with the situation. It was known that in the event of Mr. Payne's death the president would designate Mr. Wynne as acting postmaster reneral because of his familiarity as first ssistant postmaster general with the affairs of the department. Two days after the death of Mr. Payne the president so designated Mr. Wynne and indicated his intention of naming him as postmaster general until such time as George B. Cortelyou, chairman of the republican national committee, could arrange his affairs so as to assume the duties of postmaster general. Mr. Wynne was appointed first assistant postmaster general on April 17, 1902. For nearly a guarter of a century he had been Washington newspaper correspondent

Washington correspondent of the New York It was information he had secured as a partment after his appointment, that led statement drew forth cheers. Mr. Wynne to make the recommendations to Postmaster General Payne which resulted in the sensational developments in the Postoffice department. It is thought probable that Mr. Wynne will be succeeded by Mr. Cortelyou as postmaster general about January 1, 1905. Meantime a successor to Mr. Wynne will likely not be appointed.

Mr. Wynne was formally inducted into his new office at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Pleads for Post Canteens.

The annual report of General George B. Davis, judge advocate general, to the secretary of war shows the total number of trials by general court-martial during the year to have been 4,249, being 1,026 less than in the preceding year. "The marked diminution in the number of trials by general court-martial, which amounts to nearly 20 per cent of the number of cases tried in the year ended June 30, 1903," says the judge advocate general, "is very gratifying, as indicating that the conditions of the milltary service are now such as to require less frequent resort to court-martial procedure in order to maintain discipline in the military establishment."

It also is noted that only two persons were tried by military commisssion, seventy less than in the preceding year. Commenting on this the general says: "The large decrease in trials by military commission was due to the fact that peace existed during the entire year in the Philippine islands except in certain portions inhabited by the Moro tribes."

When the verdiet was rendered in November the people realized for the moment that they stood face to face with new conditions and there was instantly felt in all of the trade centers a sense of insecurity. Commerce furled her salis and in the great industries uncertainty of the future predominated. Factories closed down and the army of workmen were reduced. The people then began to appreciate the enormity of their error at the ballot box and they found themselves in distress. We began to fall as the plummet descends to the bottom of the well until hope almost died out of our hearts.

This story caught the audience and pleased it immensely, but not so much as the senator's other funny story regarding the two engineers. It is to the effect that during a strike on a railroad engineers were advertised for. Among those who responded was a man who had run a sawmill engine all his life and knew nothing about a locomotive. He was attracted by the high salary offered and made up his mind to try it. He did so and was given charge of an engine. He jerked the throttle wide open and the machine sped away, across a turntable and into a roundhouse. The man at the throttle reversed the lever just in time and the engine sprinted out in the yards; the performance was repeated and the engine again was sent back. Trusts may be strong, but the government is stronger. There is no combination which is not amenable to the public law.

The republican party has sought in a wise and effective way to restrain the abuses which have grown out of the development. It has not made war upon enterprises engaged in industry or commerce. It has not been provoked to strike out against good and bad with like impertiality, but has sought to ascertain the evils existing, or liable to arise, and to enact laws to cure or prevent them. It has done practically all that has been accomplished under national authority in a way not only to restrain or prevent abuses of corporate power, but it has effectively enforced the, laws which were enacted by it fearlessly and without partiality. Whenever laws have been deemed necessary in the public interest the republican party has put them upon the statute books, and it has executed them as they were intended and as the public interest required.

showed them that the democratic party has always been the one of opposition and platform abandonment and juggling. He told funny stories to make his reasoning appeal. The tariff, he said, resolved itself into the matter of ordering the manufacture of goods at home with American labor instead of abroad with European labor. The alleged extravagance in republican national administration is not true, the Iowa congressman declared. He admitted increased sums had been spent, but he pointed to the extension of the agricultural department, development of irrigation, building of the navy, installation of rural free delivery routes and increased cost of the postal service due to heavy business, which in turn was brought about by prosperous conditions.

Congressman Smith called upon the republicans of the Second Nebraska district vote for John L. Kennedy for congress and at the mention of the Omahan's name a mighty cheer went up, as if in affirmative answer.

BRYAN SPEAKS IN MISSOURI Urges Support of Parker as Lesser of Two Evils.

MARYVILLE, Mo., Oct. 10.-William J. Bryan addressed an open-air meeting here vicissitudes into which the nation had today. He made an earnest plea for the come under democratic rule and the cry election of Joseph W. Folk, democratic candidate for governor of Missouri. Mr. Bryan said that Mr. Folk's defeat, were it by any possibility to occur, would be in the nature of a calamity to the democratic party, because it would be a happening that could never be explained.

Referring to the national campaign Mr Bryan said that he believed his bearers would give him credit for courage enough to oppose Parker openly if he did not consider him the best man for the place, and said he hoped that his reputation for truth and veracity was such that his friends would believe him when he said he was supporting the democratic nominees every means in his power. He said that he was supporting Parker because in all things weere Parker was weak according to his view Rossevelt was weaker. He The senator declared he bore no ill will stated that he had pronounced imperialism to be the paramount issue four years ago and that he still considered it so. He closed his speech with an appeal to the democrats to support the national ticket, so that if Parker should be successful the supporters of the Kansas City and Chicago platforms would be in line to take up thos: things they had always believed in and in which they still believe.

CHILLICOTHE, Mo., Oct. 10,-William J Bryan addressed a large outdoor meeting in Elm park this afternoon. Having been introduced as "the man who would some day be president of the United States" Mr. Bryan said that he used to think he would be president, and that he was the Moses of the democratic party. "But I don't think so now," he said. "Moses, you know, was slow of speech, and the Lord selected Aaron as his speechmaker. I believe that I am the Aaron rather than the Moses of democracy, and I am willing to be the Aaron of the party if our Moses, who has Aaron of the party if our Moses, who has been so slow of speech, will but lead the people out of the wilderness." Mr. Bryan spoke along the same lines as at Maryville

I will say with reference to the third tenet that the sense in which evil is here, defined to be unreal is briefly this, that it is not created by God. He never sent it into the world. It has no place in the eternal realm of infinite truth where all is pure and holy. Therefore Christian Science places it on the human plane. On this plane it is real. So real that the Bible was sent to awaken the world out of its this plane it is real. So real that the Bible was sent to awaken the world out of its sinful condition. So real that Jesus Christ was sent to redeem the world by pointing the way out of sin. Sin is real as a human belief, but not as a divine fact. It is temporal because subject to destruction. If it were real in the sense that it is eternal it never could be destroyed, in which case mankind would be in a hopeless plight. In this sense and this sense only is sin here defined to be unreal.

Judge Hanna closed by illustrating the claims that Christian Science is the scriptural method of healing all manner of diseases and of curing all manner of sin through the understanding of God as an night so calm that I could not help but all-present, all-powerful, all-wise and uni-

Scarcely ever have the men officially connected with the congressional campaign been so universally optimistic. In addition to hearing these reports from the members arrangements were made for the campaign. A second meeting will be held in two weeks at the same office.
