QUANT FEATURES OF LIFE.
In Sumatra the length of time that a widow must wear her weeds is determined by the wind. Just after her husband's death she plants a flagstaff at her door, upon which a flag is raised. While the flag remains upon the wind etiquet forbids that she should marry. But as soon as a rent appears, no matter how tiny, she can lay aside her weeds and don her most becoming gown and bewitching smile.

observed a suspicious stranger who was unable to give a good account of himself. The officer found on the man a porch climber's outfit, including dark lantern and coil of rope. Pilschke did not think he could handle his prisoner and at the same time take care of his wheel, which he feared to leave behind. So he made the man put his hands on either side of a lamp post and handcuffed him there. Then he went for help.

again, but he is not satisfied, and his bride-to-be is still less convinced, that the $3 transaction severed the ties between him and the first Mrs. Rosegrant with sufficient finality. With a fine regard for the proprieties he has brought a suit for divorce against his legal wife before testing the cooking capacities of the other woman on a permanent basis.

While the Lehigh Valley express was bowling along the tracks toward Yatesville, Pa., at a speed of fifty miles an hour, the engineer, looking from the window of the caboose, saw a red flag being waved on the track some distance ahead. A second look showed the engineer that the flag was almost on the ground and was waved as if by the hand of some one reclining upon the ground. The train was brought to a stop and the engineer ran forward. On the track, a short distance ahead of the locomotive, the engineer found a small, curly haired dog, vigorously waving the danger flag which he held in his teeth. The engineer looked about, but seeing that the tracks were clear, he picked the dog up in his arms and took him on the train to Yatesville. Here it was found that the dog belonged to Bernard Dougherty, a track walker, who for six years had always been accompanied on his beat by the dog. Dougherty died yesterday, and at the usual time his dog went to the railroad shanty, took the red flag in his teeth, and trotted down the track with the danger signal as he had seen his master do.

Mr. Bachelor went to his father's home in Carlos City, Randolph county. Bachelor claimed he suffered in his body because of the crowded condition of his hands in the jar. He believed that if the hands were buried his pains would cease. The hands were expressed to Carlos City, where they were straightened out and placed carefully in clean wrappers of linen and securely packed in a wooden box for interment. As soon as they were straightened out Mr. Bachelor experienced great relief.

Within the last few weeks several cases have come before Justice Bauber in Cleveland involving attempts by rejected suitors to get their presents back. Become tired of this kind of litigation, his honor suggests that when Cleveland swains make presents to maidens the following contract should be agreed to: "It is hereby agreed that this—(here the words bouquet, hat, diamond ring or souvenir spoon may be inserted) is for use only during the period of courtship. It is hereby agreed that said (bouquet, hat, etc.) shall be returned at once upon day of snub, if any. Engagement to another man to be considered as snub."
