Interesting and Timely Reading for and About Women Folks

Status of the Trained Nurse. THE trained nurse is the latest product in the evolution of social cience, which seeks to mitigate and relieve in the highest degree human physical suffering. It is not enough that medicine and surgery, with all the aid which mechanical and chemical science can add to their ef-fectiveness, shall be ready to use all their resources for the relief of the sick and of our kind. The gentle hands and tender ministrations of women are also Who that has endured extreme physical suffering has not realised the the great Sir Walter Scott's inrocation to the gentler sex:

O woman! in our hours of ease, Uncertain, coy and hard to please, And variable as the shade By the light quivering aspen made; When pain and angulah wring the brow, A ministering angel thou!

Sweet as are these gentle ministrations, how much more effective are they when them is further equipped with skill and knowledge. When, in the early '60s of the century which has just passed away. forence Nightingale appeared in the army hospital of the English troops in the Cri-mean war, the figure of a lovely and refined woman, ininistering to the bloody and mutilated victims of battle, or to the feverstricken thousands of the army camps. astonishing the world, and marked her as irse is in the hospitals of every great and among the sick and wounded fevery army camp of the civilized world, is truly a ministering angel cause her mind is stored with all the knowledge that belongs to her art, and her deft fingers are quick and skillful to execute

The great organized hospitals of the world of today do not date very far back into the past. To the nations of only after the thousands on thousnds of men from every part of Europe, returning from the Crusades, brought with them and spread everywhere leprosy and and spread everywhere leprosy and close student of human nature, possessed Asiatic diseases, that hospitals were of an unusually penetrating mind and with as were confined, with but little medial care and attention. None of the ex-brought to any degree of scientific organization and broadminded beneficence, and the trained nurse is the last expression of this grand system of benefaction. The tendant. She must know about the application and action of medicines, and the preparation and application of surgical dressings. Ventilation, the maintenance of cleanitness in the person and surroundings of the patient, the preparation and quality of food, attention to the state of mind of the patient and the keeping up of cheerfulness, with at the same time all the rest and quiet that the case may require, are some of the duties of the nurse, and to that end she must study for years professional text books, and at the same time practice at the bedside in all sorts of cases. With such a training the nurse becomes a professional person.-New Orleans

Century Home. Cleaning Furniture.

The sweeping and dusting which take place at this time of the year are of a most particular kind. Moisten a cloth and fasten it around the broom just over the broom part. This will keep the dust from rising and make the work easier. Sweep always with long, firm strokes, away and to the front of the sweeper. Always sweep away from and dust toward the worker. The dust cloths should be of soft old silk, and nearly every housekeeper has on hand old umbrella cases, gowns, petticoats, waists, etc., to furnish silk dusters; failing, those of silk, cheesecloth is the next best, but do not use a cloth dampened with water. For varnished furniture, dampen the cloth with kerosene, but for genuine polished surfaces a different treatment is required. When the polished surface of the piano is soiled and duli-looking, wet over with paraffin oil and let it remain for two hours. Apply the oil sparingly and at the end of the time polish with linen and chamois. This is cleaning, however, and not dusting. Always use two cloths for dusting, one in each hand. Then every time the left hand rests on a polished surface there will not be left the trace of solled fingers and perspiration. invited to attend a reception at the gov- It is a great mistake not to have on hand so generous a supply of dust cloths that one can afford to change very often, for dusting furniture with solled cloths does much to injure the finish, especially of poiished furniture. For carved furniture that is dusty use a fine paint brush, dipped into kerosens oil; brush over the carvings and they will appear bright as when new; or, dip the brush in a good furniture polish. Who is not tormented with "white spots" on the dining room table? To remedy have ready three cloths, and three saucers containing, one kerosene, one alcohol and one sweet oil. Apply the kerosene first of all.

From Fashlou's Notebook. Dahlia shades are in high favor. Dead roses are conspicuous in floral gar-niture for hats. Guipure lace embroidered with chenille a modish decoration.

Insets of lace are charming in the new, handsome siks for evening wear. Leather in all shades of tan from choco-ate to amber figures largely as trimming strings of pearls in the world.

Mrs. Agnes Knox Biack, wife of Prof. E. Charlion Black of Cambridge, has been appointed to the Boston unive.sity facuity, on which she is the only woman. She takes the piace of Prof. Maivins M. Bennet, head of the department of elocution and oratory, who has been granted a year's leave of absence. Mrs. Black is a Cansdian by birth. Like her husband, she is well known upon the piatform, both in this country and in Canada. She was educated in the public schools of Toronto, and graduated with distinction from Toronto university. She took post-graduate work in Philadelphia.

Leather, soft and pliable, is used for vests for long coats, as well as for belts, pipings and facings to collars, revers and cuffs.

Woven tapestry squares framed in wide mats of velvet are used for wall decoration. The frame matches the tapestry in color and the picture is hung by a thin wire.

Proceedings when the best former was a color and the picture is hung by a thin wire. Broadtall velvet is in high favor for separate coats. This material, being already crushed, will not wrinkle or crease. Its durability recommends it, whether its appearance does or not.

In the Flemish potteries there are charming things with a bronze finish. These are reproductions of well-known pieces of statuary and are made in excellent molds. Trey are both large and small. The fad fur this year is calfakin. Neck-pleces, flat, pillow-shaped muffs, and cont collars in this striking brown and white fur are seen a great deal. Undeniably smart-looking, the new fur is too freaky to last long, unless for motoring.

Silver and gold threads are woven into other evening silks. These are combined with a brocaded design. A tiny plant in the brocade has a flower of gold or silver threads, or, in another design, the stamens of the flowers are of the silver or gold. Automobiling has evolved numberless models in long and half-long coats. These shapes, modified and trimmed to suit the occasion, will do duty as street wraps. Much fur will be used, and the startling combinations seen last winter will again

Chinchilla is a lovely fur to use on the trish point and other lace coats-which will be worn in the evening. The fluffy lightness of the fur contrasts favorably with the heavier mink for this purpose. Sable is, of course, excellent, but not everybody buys sables.

The fashionable muff is the flat pillow shape, and to accompany it are worn flat, short scarfs with chenilic fringes finishing the ends. Some of these acarfs are straight bands with rounded or shaped ends, while others have rounded collars, narrowing where the tie is formed.

Never were so many ribbon decorations used on evening gowns. Corsage garnitures of ribbon flowers, with velvet leaves, are much in vogue. Yards of ribbons are cut

"The prettlest sight imaginable, and one I have never seen outside of the United States, is the promenade of your beautiful girls and young women on the streets of evenings, when they appear without any sort of head covering, sand Samuel Goidey of London, quoted by the Washington Fost.

"To my mind this is one of the prettlest most picturesque and fascinating customs that ever the fair sex adopted, and it seems to have reached the acme of its development right here in your capital. In their spotiess white garments and without hats or bonnets, the quintessence of fesnining charm is revealed. Though I have been all over the civilized world, I never saw the practice till I came to America."
