to Become a Petition Candidate.

At an executive session of the board of governors of the Fontanelle club Saturday evening the principal subject under discussion was Howell's candidacy for water commissioner

Mr. Howell was questioned on the matter before and after the meeting, and on both occasions he said he would have to await "developments" before he would commit himself. He did not care to say whether he would or would not make the race as a petition candidate. Members of the Fontanelle board of managers freely expressed themselves after the meeting as being for Howell and several said they were confi-

RESCUED FROM A RUNAWAY

wo Children, Helpless Through Fear, saved by Courageous

Policeman.

The prompt action and bravery of two olicemen, Sergeant McBride and Patrolnan Patrick Mulqueen of the Stanton avenue station, Chicago, was all that saved two little schoolgirls from probably instant death recently, Without an instant's hesitation the two policemen threw themselves in the way of a runaway horse that was bearing down upon the girls, and, thrusting them out of the way, grasped the horse by the bridle and brought it to a standstill.

Della and Dora Doolittle, aged 10 and 11 years, respectively, who live with their parents at 3447 Verson avenue, are the children who owe their lives to the two offi-They were on their way to school COFE. and were crossing Thirty-fifth street, when a horse belonging to M. Thorp, a commission dealer of 4159 Cottage Grove avenue, suddenly dashed around the corner of Rhodes avenue, and, turning into the street, bore down upon the little girls.

Della was the first to become aware of the impending danger. Aroused by a scream from a woman on the sidewalk, she raised her head and saw the frenzied animal approaching. "Oh, Dora," was all she could say, as she dropped her books and stood staring in terror. Her sister, following Della's glance, saw the horse, and she, too, was stricken with fear.

It was at this stage that the policemen intervened and probably saved the lives of the school chlidren. Patrolman Mulquean, sceing the danger that the children were in, aprang for the horse's head, but owing to the speed at which the animal was running failed to reach the rein, and was forced to hang to the harness. He hung on gamely. and clung to the horse, which now swerved to the right and attempted to shake its load.

In the meantime Sergeant McBride had run into the middle of the street. With one move he pushed the two little girls who were still standing in the path of the runaway to the sidewalk, and the next in-stant leaped for the animal's head as it reached him, still dragging the plucky Mul-Grasping the bridle he lent his queen. strength to that of the patrolman, and between them they finally succeeded in bringng the panting horse to a standstill, Neither of the policemen was injured, and the little girls, although badly frightened. escaped without a scratch. The greatest harm done was to the frock of Dora, who tripped and fell in the mud, when pushed out of harm's way by the brawny sergeant. The parents of the little girls when they heard of their children's narrow escape were filled with gratitude. The father and mother both paid a visit to the station house last evening and thanked the heroes in person for their brave act. "Pshaw that was nothing." said Patrolman Mulqueen, modestly. "I saw the little tots there and knew they were in danger. But it's nothing to stop a runaway, if you know how."-Chicago Inter Ocean.
