

NEBRASKA DAY AT THE FAIR

One Thousand Residents of State Take Part in Ceremonies at St. Louis.

ADDRESSES BY DISTINGUISHED CITIZENS

Governor Macey, John L. Webster and G. W. Wattle's Talk at the Services Held in the Festival Hall.

1854 was a dividing-line and marked an epoch in American history. From the date of the Louisiana purchase to 1854 was half a century. From 1854 until now is half a century. In 1848 the United States had acquired more than one-half of its present territory, but it had not reached one-half of its present wealth or population, and it was about to begin the settlement of a question of social and personal liberty that would banish the yoke of barbarism and inaugurate the reign of civilization.

From Benjamin Franklin's day down to 1854 the maps and official reports of the United States described the area which Nebraska forms a part as barren as the deserts of Siberia and the prairie states of fifty years ago.

Nebraska stands out before me typical of American history. In its early settlement it can see a picture in my mind of the day, under different skies and under different conditions, undergoing the same hardships and privations of the Pilgrim Fathers upon the bleak shores of New England and working out the problems of life and learning the lesson of human liberty.

Expansion and Annexation. Nebraska's part in the acquisition of territory and product of its beneficial policy of expansion and power of annexation. Every step which Nebraska has taken to expansion and annexation has had its typical example in the Louisiana purchase of which the territory which Nebraska occupies was a part of.

Revolution and Free Soil. The passage of the Nebraska bill in the American congress was a battle between giants in American statesmanship, who were fighting over again the question of human liberty as our American fathers fought for it from the Declaration of Independence to the surrender at Yorktown.

Nebraska compared to other states. Nebraska does not lose in prestige when put into comparison with its sister states of the republic. In area it is one of the largest. It all of New England were on the island sea it could be placed within the limits of Nebraska.

In July, 1831, I began to break out with Eczema on my head, legs and arms, and began treatment with local doctors, but did not get much relief. They said the disease had become chronic. I then quit them and tried various ointments and ointments for another two years, but as soon as cold weather came I was as bad as ever, so I finally decided to let medicine alone, and for twelve or thirteen years did nothing towards curing the Eczema, except bathing. This seemed to do about as much good as anything I had tried.

During the time I lost about one-half of my hair. I began S. S. S. doubtful of a cure, because the disease ran so long, but soon discovered your medicine was doing me good, and continued to take it. I used seven bottles, when I was completely cured, not having a single spot on my body, which had been almost completely covered.

The head, feet and hands are usually the parts affected, though the disease appears on other parts of the body. While external applications relieve the itching and burning temporarily, it is the acids thrown off by the blood that cause the irritation and eruptions upon the skin. S. S. S. neutralizes these acids and cleanses the blood of all humors and poisons and builds up the entire system. S. S. S. is guaranteed entirely free of poisons, arsenic and other minerals. Our booklet on Eczema and its diseases will be sent free. Medical advice furnished without charge.

to the body and clearness to the intellect. More than $50,000,000 in accumulative wealth and with the vast percentage of becoming in its more mature statehood one of the greatest commonwealths in the union.

Nebraska has already drawn to itself and includes in its present boundaries more than 400,000 people that have come to it from its sister states of the republic. Napoleon in his day of power gathered from every gallery of Europe whatever was of the richest and best in art and placed them upon the walls of the Louvre, where he carried out his policy of beauty and art for the pleasure and benefit and culture of the French people.

On the contrary, the gateway to the west is as fair as the entrance to Eden. Its pillars are of grand proportions, surrounded by flowering bayonets and beautiful lawns, which are suggestive of happiness and contentment in the present and promise on its greatest arch in the letters of shining gold and artistic forms can be traced.

I can never think of the past and present without speculating and dreaming upon the future. I cannot see the future without the glory of her departed civilization and of her art which existed 3,000 years ago. I cannot think of the golden era of the past, which existed 3,000 years ago, without thinking that possibly in some distant age, in the mysterious future, some new explorer may be found endeavoring to decipher inscriptions on some old ruins of our greatest temples, just as archeologists are now uncovering the ruins of the oldest ancient civilizations of the world.

President Wattle's Speech. Gurdon W. Wattle, president of the Nebraska Historical commission, spoke as follows: Nebraska celebrates this year the centennial of the first exploration by American men of the territory of the United States. It was on the 26th day of July, 1804, that Meriwether Lewis and Captain George A. Clark, with their intrepid band of explorers, under commission of President Jefferson, first set foot upon the soil of Nebraska.

surface, baked by the sun since the earth was formed, so this country is called and in fact was a desert. Such was the condition of the land when the pioneers made homes on the free government lands since the advent of the Union Pacific railroad in 1868.

It is interesting to note the change of sentiment which has taken place throughout the world since the time that the territory formerly designated as a part of the Great American Desert. In the discussions in the United States on the subject of the purchase of the Louisiana territory, the territory was developed. Senator White of Louisiana introduced a resolution which was adopted by the United States senate.

When I view the magnificent achievements of the west, as portrayed within the pages of the history of the west, I am filled with admiration and pride. The extent these achievements have added to the happiness of the world is incalculable. It is the millennium mentioned in holy writ has not come. And when I think that we are living in the best of times, it is because of the progress and the progress of the west, which has inspired men to do such wonderful things as surround us here.

Formalities at Fest. hall having ended, the Nebraska delegation proceeded to the east pavilion of the capades, where luncheon was spread. The exposition officials were present as guests also. The cafe is one made famous by Mrs. Sarah Rohrer, culinary lecturer, who conducted it. Despite the cool weather the moral decorations were picturesque.

During the sessions of the congress, which opened on Saturday, matters of importance to residents of the Transmississippi region will be discussed, such as "Irrigation," "Good Roads," "River Navigation" and "Interstate Commerce Laws."

Following the invitation offered by Rev. Michael Burnham of St. Louis the meeting was called to order by the chairman of the executive committee, Hon. Thomas Richardson of Portland, Ore.
