DESTRUCTION OF HUMAN LIFE

Comparison of Patalities in Wars of the Past and Present.

SURPRISING FIGURES TAKEN FROM HISTORY

The Long Bow and the Cloth Yard Shaft Killed More of the Enemy Than Modern Shot and Shell -Rend and Wonder.

The horror of war increases part passu with the advance of civilization, and the by officers and men, who secklessly exvalue set upon life has risen proportion- posed themselves to a storm of bullets; ately with our ability to appreciate its and shell fire, his losses were not more pleasures, its mutuality and associations. than 1,100 men out of a force of 25,000 to Our interests are more catholic, our sensibilities more acute. We have eliminated ably far less. from our habits and customs that ferocity of temperament whose excitement could be appeased with nothing short of bloodshed and have, to a large extent, lost our familiarity with death in its most violent forms which hardened the sentiments o less law abiding ancestors.

The modern newspaper, the telegraph and the ubiquitous war correspondent have done much to unnerve us nowadays with their speedy lists of dead and wounded friends and relatives, whereas of old the news was broken to us much more gradually and after a considerable interval had allowed some period of preparation for the sorrowful tidings. How, for instance, would this generation face such losses as those of Creey and Agincourt, if they ngured in our telegraphic reports today, when we regard with shrinking such casualty lists as those of Colenso and Kin Chau?

Partly the sentimentalism of up-to-date journalism, partly our own modern sensibility of nature, has disposed us to regard any battle losses over 1,000 as "terrible." But the strange truth is the further that we go back in the history of war we shall notice an extraordinary increase in the proportion of losses to the numbers engoged, until we begin to realize that the long bow and cloth yard shaft of our ancestors were much more deadly weapons than the modern magazine rifle, with its diminutive bullet and high velocity.

Discredited Claims.

Such facts would doubtless have confounded M. Bloch, whose favorite contention it was that owing to the deadliness of modern weapons war was rapidly becoming impossible. A closer study of history would have taught him that the discovery of gunpowder was in reality a beneficent invention which has enabled an armed struggle to be decided without the former necessity for prolonged close-quarter fighting and the deadly weapons of the melee. Moreover, the abolition of the ponderous armor of the ancient warrior, equipment, has synchronized with the growth of maneuvering power and the assertion of superiority in the field by the application of successful tactics, and with defeat by disorganization of an enemy's array in place of the heavy bludgeoning of

It cannot be charged that men are less courageous nowadays when they are cailed upon to face much more terrifying instruments of warfare. But the fact remains that the Krag-Jörgensen, the Mauser, quick

How infinitely more terrible again was the work of the bow and the battleax at the battle of Crecy in 1346, when Edward III, and his son, the black prince, routed the great army of Philip of France. The English army numbered 30,000 men, that of Philip 120,000. Again the longbow proved its terrible effectiveness. The French were utterly unable to sustain the heavy fire of its yard-long projectiles against which armor was but an indifferent protection and were routed with the loss of 1,200 knights, 1,400 esquires and 34,000 men, of whom no less than 30,000 were killed outright. The same heavy casualty lists were noticeable at the battle of Politiers, where 12,000 English defeated 60,000 French, and so terrible was the execution done by the English bowmen that 11,000 of their enemy were slain outright. Both Hastings and Bannockburn bear additional testimony to the formidable and deadly character of these old battles. At the former 30,000 mer fell on both sides, while the latter resulted in total losses of 38,000, in both cases a beavy percentage of the numbers engaged. Smaller Casualty List. As we gradually approach o we shall find not only that the proportion of those actually slain in battle to the numbers of those who are wounded show a sensible decrease, but that the total casualty lists are almost invariably smaller, in proportion to the numbers engaged, in spite of the fact that the weapons, of war are always described as growing more and more deadly. In the campaigns of Mariborough there was still much hand-to-hand fighting, for, although artillery had taken its place in the battlefield, the infantry frearm was possessed of little range or accuracy. Accordingly, at Blenheim and Malplaquet, two of the most bloody struggles of later times, although the siain short a decreasing ratio, the losses on both sides, out of a total of about 150,000 combata ats, were, in the former engagement, killed, wounded and prisoners, while the cost of driving the French from a strong position at Malplaquet was 20,000 k fled and wounded out of a force of about 50,000. Although in the larger armire of more odern times losses have reached, in many stances, a high figure, yet t'ae percentage of slaughter, especially of killed or wounded combatants, has shown a remarkable dereese from the borrible Agures of ancient battles and sieges, before the discovery of

FOR SECRETARYOF STATE.

ALGERNON GALUSHA.

An old Seward county boy who has made his mark in the world, and although he is at present a citizen of Red Cloud, Neb., yet we feel that Seward county has a right to claim him, as we sent him out to battle with the world in his young manhood. Al, as we all learned to call him, was born at Franklin Falls, N. Y., July 29, 1800, the moved at the age of 8 to Laurenceville, same state, where he was educated but he moved at the age of s to Laurenceville, same state, where he was educated in the academy. He struck the great western trail, which led him to Seward in 1881, where he clerked in a store and gained many friends, who well remember him as a bright young man of good character and very attentive to businesss.

In 1885, he went to Red Claud and was for many yetrs engaged in the mercantile business, but is at present traveling as a salesman, and although he has just been nominated by the state republican convention to be their standard bearer for secretary of state, inatead of traversing the state looking for votes, he is attending strictly to his employer's business, and we judge the people will recognize that important fact. Mr. Galusha is an honorable member of the Masonic order. Blue Lodge No. 53, at Red Cloud, also of chapter No. 19 and Cyrens Commandery No. 14. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., No. 50, at his home; is a member of the grand lodge and secretary of the finance committee.—Seward Blads.
