

BURLINGTON FOLLOWS SUIT

Reduces Rates on Screenings and Mine Run Coal After Rock Island.

EFFECT IS TO CUT DOWN CONSUMPTION

These Reductions Are Expected to Lead to Other Cuts, Which May Viciously Disturb the General Situation.

The action taken by the Rock Island Monday in the matter of steam coal rates was followed by the Burlington this morning with a tariff reducing the rates on screenings and mine run to quite a number of interior towns in the state.

By this reduction steam coal and mine run coal goes to Nemaha, Bracken, Auburn, Rulo, Preston, Falls City, Salem, Verdon and Shubert, in this state, and Fortescue, Mo., all receive the $2.06 rate as compared with $1.15, the rate in force today.

It remained for the Rock Island to cut the traces and do for Omaha much better than ever. When the cupidity of the Burlington, backed by the desire of one Crane to make a reputation as chief of the coal traffic, advanced the rates of steam coal 15 cents a ton, Omaha kicked and made it unanimous.

Curtailed in Supply. The long fall caused a large curtailment of consumption and at many of the mines coal began to accumulate in large quantities. The Rock Island found this especially the case and longed eyes were cast on Omaha as a market for consumption.

GYPSY DRIVES WOMAN MAD

Cheap Fortune Teller Arouses Wife Against Her Husband.

VICTIM RAVES IN HER PITIFUL INSANITY

Imagines Her Husband is Not Faithful in His Devotion and Litter is Unable to Dispel Illusion.

Driven insane by the prophecies of a cheap fortune teller, the wailing wife of A. A. Hildebrand tumbles upon a cot in the county jail alternately weeping and raving in her delirium.

The case is a sad one. Mrs. Hildebrand has not been in good health. Some time ago she conceived the idea that her husband was not true to her. She went to a fortune teller in the northern part of the city and a forecast was made which satisfied the woman that her suspicions were not groundless.

Several days ago she returned to the fortune teller, who repeated the first stories against the husband. These stories preyed upon the woman's mind and Monday afternoon she began to rave.

Tuesday afternoon her condition became more serious. She raved and tore her clothing from her body. Efforts to quiet her were unavailing and she was removed to the county jail. This morning she was calmer and her husband tried to have her removed to her home.

Mr. Hildebrand clerk in one of the city stores and is an industrious young man, respected by his acquaintances. He attributes his wife's condition to ill-health and to the fact of the stories told by the fortune teller, which he believes preyed upon her mind until they unbalanced her reason.

BARROWS GETS NICE TRIBUTE

Federal Building Custodian is Complimented by Washington Architect on Decorations and Paintings.

Richard Fourley, from the supervising architect's office at Washington, inspected the painting and decorations of the federal building Monday and complimented Custodian Barrows on the high class of the work.

Work on placing the two long skylights over the main work room of the postoffice in place of the present slate roof will begin at once. The Kenneth Glass company has been awarded the contract for replacing the stained glass transoms over the letter boxes in the main corridor with clear prism glass and the work will begin at once.

Custodian Barrows has taken up with the department the necessity of putting deflecting shields over each of the 13 radiators in the building to keep the walls clean. This will entail a large expense, but will be more than compensated for by the permanent cleanliness of the walls, especially near the radiators.

Over 2,000 words were sent out by the Union Pacific during the night. Bulletins were put on the wire every half hour and overtook every other train in motion between Omaha and San Francisco. Under the direction of Alfred Darlow, the head of the advertising department, the service was continued all night and bulletins were awaiting the trains at every station. In this way the passenger of the Overland was kept posted on the situation.

The service is being continued today, all westbound and eastbound first-class trains being overtaken by the dispatches at various points on the road. Eight trains being served by the news dispatches and until Wednesday at midnight the dispatches will be sent out at intervals of an hour.

Salie Cottrell, colored, living on North Eleventh street, has been bound from the police to the district court on a charge of larceny from the person of Arthur March of Dayton, O. The story told at the police station is that March came to Omaha a few days ago with a sum of money and six $100 bills. He was enroute from his home in the Buckeye state to Colorado and stopped over in the Gate City for a few days to relieve the monotony of the trip. He maintains Miss Cottrell relieved him of his money. March says he met the woman at a lunch stand in the prescribed district and bought her a sandwich. Not wishing March to do all the honors the woman asked the Ohioan to her home, so he says. He went to the woman's home and pitched his tent for the night. When March arose the next morning, he alleges, his money was gone. Miss Cottrell was bound over in the sum of $1,000.

ANNOUNCEMENTS OF THE THEATERS

The regular mid-week matinee at the Orpheum today will be the one theatrical event scheduled at the theaters. The vaudeville show is well varied and contains some strong features. To single out one from a number of them for praise would almost seem invidious, as they appeal along quite different lines for favor.

All the music of "Babes in Toyland," which comes to the Boyd for four nights, beginning Sunday, was written for it by that eminent musician, Victor Herbert. It is one of the most pretentious works by that composer and it is said that he has quite surpassed himself in the production. The principal charm of the "Babes in Toyland," aside from the beauty of the production, lies in Mr. Herbert's music, although it is said that the book is quite a worthy one. In Glen MacDonough's best vein. These two elements, taken with the able stage direction of Julian Mitchell, have combined to make the attraction one of the sensational successes of the past year. A special matinee will be given on Wednesday.
